Trails Runaway Wife To Hull, Slays Her, Suicides

HULL, Que. (CP)—Police today began unraveling the case of a west coast tax-line operator who, they said, trailed his wife 2,500 miles and shot her to death with a newly-purchased rifle and then killed himself.

Police Chief J. A. Robert identified the middle-aged couple as Mr. and Mrs. Henry Knudsen of Prince George, B.C., where they operated a small taxi-cab service.

The case was described by the police chief as one of room of a third-floor room, registered in the name of the murder and suicide.

The bodies were discovered in the blood-stained bath-husband, at the Standish Hall Hotel, a dine-and-dance night spot.

Police responded to an anonymous telephone call that "Someone is dead in Room 54." Police said the call did not come from the hotel. The anonymous caller was identified later as Robert Maloney, 41, of Prince Rupert, B.C., one of two men who had accompanied Mrs. Knudsen on her trip east.

"Maloney made the call," said the police chief. "He admitted this in questioning by us."

Chief Robert said his men investigated the stories of Maloney and of Robert Belanger, both 41-year-old Prince Rupert construction workers, with whom Mrs. Knudsen drove to Ottawa from the coast April 30.

STICKERS TELL ROUTE

Stickers on the car window indicated they had come east by way of North Dakota, Montana, Minnesota and Indiana. They took separate rooms at the Chez Henri Hotel here.

Knudsen arrived by plane Friday and took a room at the Standish Hall Hotel, a few blocks from the Chez Henri.

Police questioned the two construction workers but Chief Robert said they were not being held.

"It is a straight case of murder and suicide—no doubt about it," he said.

In a hotel bedroom adjoining the bathroom where the bodies were found, detectives discovered the wrappings and box that had contained the rifle, which Chief Robert said had been "brand new." An almost-full bottle of whisky was on a table.

Eugene Blondon, Hull taxi-driver, said he was certain that a passenger in his cab Friday was Henry Knudsen.

They traveled from one sports shop to another, he said, looking for a 30-30 rifle and shells.

Maloney told a reporter that he had discovered the bodies, after waiting for the Knudsen couple all day and telephoning the room to receive no answer. He and Belanger walked over to Knudsen's room, found the door open, and discovered the bodies.

Marshall Fears Russia May Act

Assumes Soviet Likely To Attack In Europe Any Time

WASHINGTON (AP)—Defence Secretary George C. Marshall said today Russia is "our real opponent" in Korea, and he operates on the assumption the Russians "may step into aggression at any moment" in Western Europe.

In blunt language, Marshall said Moscow could make the Chinese Communists call off their aggression in Korea "in a moment" if it wished.

The Russians are "certainly providing" the Chinese Communists "with the bulk of their war-making materiel," Marshall said. He added that "the Chinese Communist forces would be utterly unable to maintain themselves without a very direct support by the Soviet government."

Marshall said he believes troop contributions of other United Nations members fighting in Korea are increasing. He added: 'I think we have good prospects for further increases."

Censors struck out about 80 words of what Marshall said following this.

At the same time, he told the closed-door Senate armed services and foreign relations committee investigating the firing of Gen. Douglas MacArthur that he feels the risk of provoking Russia to war in the Far East is greater than is the danger in Europe.

Senator Harry P. Cain (Rep. Wash.) asked Marshall to state his "fundamental reasons for assuming that an aggression will not take place in Western Europe until we are better prepared to meet it, while seemingly you believe that Russia will enter the Korean conflict if we bomb and destroy military installations possessed by the Red Chinese?"

"In regard to Western Europe, first I go on the basis myself that Russia may step into the aggression at any moment.

MAY TAKE YEARS

"Also that that is no argument that we do our best to prepare for it even though it may take two or three years.

"In other words, we don't sit impotent and say Russia can act at any time and therefore we do nothing. That is the sense of the European rearmament proposals."

Marshall said reports received by the United States indicate a continuous Soviet build-up, by rearrangement of her troops in Europe and by increasing her strength in the Far East.

Marshall told the committees that the Secretaries of the Army, Navy and Air Force were not consulted before MacArthur was fired.

Suspect Arson In Blaze

Quell Threat To Up-Island Mill

SPECIAL TO THE TIMES

DUNCAN — Four sets of footprints in the dew-laden grass were discovered by millworkers early today leading to the foot of a giant mound of sawdust found blazing outside the $25,000 sawmill of Evans Lumber Company here.

Prints are thought to be those of arsonists who walked from their car parked on the Cowichan Lake Road across some 200 yards of grass to the pile of sawdust and shavings from the planer mill, which stands only a few yards from some 50,000 board feet of lumber stacked in front of the mill.

"We have been giving away the sawdust lately," said Robert Evans, father of mill owner Clarence Evans, who was away in Vancouver. "But I don't think the fire was caused by men going to get sawdust. They went to the back of the pile, and I think they must have used gas, coal oil or diesel oil to start the fire. The sawdust was wet and a cigaret won't start it off.

"In the winter, when we burn the dust, we have to scrape several inches away and use oil to start a fire."

CALLED OUT MEN

Mr. Evans saw the smoke from the pile through the window of the house close to the mill in which he lives.

"I called out some of the men, who normally don't work today, to come down and move some of the lumber which was stacked near the burning sawdust. If the wind changed there was a danger of the fire spreading to the mill, and destroying the $12,000 worth of lumber that was stacked in front of it."

R.C.M.P. officers inspected the tracks in the wet sawdust at the foot of the pile, but it is understood that they were unable to take impressions.

Yanks Score Another Win In Cup Match

BIRKDALE, Eng. (AP)—American amateur golfers scored another victory over Britain in the Walker Cup matches today, 6 to 3, but only after the home forces had put upon a spectacular rally to win three of the day's eight singles matches and break even in another.

Leading 2 to 0 after yesterday's Scotch foursomes, the Americans won the first three singles today and clinched at least a tie with a 5 to 0 margin.

But then the tied turned and the British players swept to three brilliant victories and a half before the firing died. Harold Pollock Jr. of Cleveland, three holes down and four to play, put on a magnificent rally to square his match with Ian Caldwell on the 36th hole.

Captain Willie Turnesa, Frank Stranahan and Charlie Coe went down before the closing British onslaught.

Jimmy McHale of Philadelphia scored the clinching victory, a two-up decision over John Langley.

This gave the Americans a total of six triumphs and made it impossible for the Britons to gain a tie.

The visitors ran up a 2-to-0 lead in yesterday's Scotch foursomes.

Smoke Veils Enemy

Prepares For New Korea Offensive

TOKYO (AP) — Chinese Communists today hid their build-up for a second spring offensive in Korea behind a smoke curtain from burning timber and smudge pots.

The drive was expected by United Nations officers within two weeks.

The areas of the man-made fires indicated that the next blows may come from points 20 miles northwest and 45 miles northeast of Seoul.

A 35-mile-long wall of smoke partly covered Red troop movements in the mountainous centre down a highway leading toward Chunchon.

U.N. fliers saw Communist soldiers moving in scattered pairs to make air attack difficult.

The smoke screen, extended from Kumhwa to Inje, towns north of the 38th parallel. Chunchon is eight miles south of the parallel.

Another smoke pall was sent up by the Reds near Munsan, about 20 miles northwest of Seoul. The Red concentration there was 12 miles south of 38.

Between Munsan and Chunchon, other Communist build-ups have been observed. They were near Pupyong and Kapyong, 15 and 32 miles northeast of Seoul.

U.N. forces set up air-raid warnings, camouflaged key building and sandbagged shelters in the belief that the next offensive may be supported by planes.

The same smoke fires preceded the first Red offensive of April 22. But planes and tanks failed to show in force and the foot-soldier avalanche came to a halt 10 days after losses exceeded 75,000.

The heaviest troop movement today was reported southeastward from Kumhwa toward Chunchon in central Korea.

U.N. fliers saw troops skirting the western edge of Hwachon reservoir, seven miles north of the 38th parallel.

PATS GUZZLE BEER 'NEATH KOREAN SUN

WITH CANADIANS IN KOREA (CP) — The First Canadian beer to reach the 2nd Battalion of the Princess Patricias in Korea was guzzled today by the thirsty soldiers in a broiling 80-degree sun.

The shipment was transported by welfare officer Lieut. Bill Campbell of Winnipeg. He made a special trip to the South Korean port where the 25th Canadian Infantry Brigade arrived.

Lieut. Campbell brought only enough "suds" to hold the battalion until the brigade reaches the front area with the bulk of the supplies.

Atom Blast At Eniwetok To Test Defence Measure

HONOLULU (AP)—The United States has exploded another bomb at Eniwetok in the first atomic test emphasizing defence against the A-bomb.

Even the time of the closely-guarded "Operation Greenhouse" explosion was not definitely known. But presumbaly it took place Monday or Tuesday in the 200-square-mile proving grounds 2,000 miles west of here.

Its force was thrown against structures built at the Eniwetok proving ground to develop information on construction, design and materials which best can withstand the bomb.

Early speculation that the test might involve a hydrogen bomb was discounted.

First positive word on the latest test came from a congressman, Henry M. Jackson (Dem. Wash.). He said here that he had attended "A test" at Eniwetok.

Later in Washington a member of the Senate-House atomic committe said "the test has been finished."

This source said May 7 was the target date for the main and final test at Eniwetok. Results had not yet been evaluated.

The Atmonic Energy Commission said only that a "test program is under way" at Eniwetok.

Jackson, just before leaving by plane for San Francisco and Seattle, said he would hold a press conference tomorrow.

The gov't gives us baby bonuses until we're 16, pensions after 70. It's thet danged 54 years in between thet kills me.

France Faces General Vote

PARIS (AP)—A general election in France next month was assured when the French National Assembly voted early today to end its owns life on July 4. The vote was 361 to 229.

June 17 is expected to be the date for the general election, the first since Oct. 13, 1946.

This year's balloting normally would have come in the fall. Premier Henri Queuille predicted, however, that if the voting were not held soon the nation virtually would be without a responsible government until the end of the year.

The action of the Assembly was the last of a series of votes of confidence which Queuille had demanded in support of his Coalition of middle-of-the-road parties. In the last three weeks, he had asked and received eight other such votes as part of his campaign to change the electorial laws in order to cut down Communist strength and to push up the election date.

Man Killed In Crossing Crash

WINNIPEG (CP) — Canadian National Railways' officials here today said one man was killed when their No. 12 train from Edmonton and Saskatoon was in collision with a truck at a level crossing early today four miles west of Portage La Prairie, Man.

Dead is Russell McBride, of Portage, driver of the grain truck.

The train was allowed to proceed to Winnipeg. No other details are immediately available.

Clouds Hamper Search For Missing Plane

FAIRCHILD AIR FORCE BASE, Wash. (UP) — Poor weather conditions hampered the air search today for an air force C-47 transport plane with two crewmen aboard which disappeared en route from McChord Air Force Base, Wash., and was presumed down.

Two B17's, a C-82 and six to 12 civil air patrol planes were standing by to take up the search as seen as weather permitted. However, the weather bureau at Spokane said low hanging clouds and rain or snow was expected in the area.

The state highway patrol joined in the ground search.

The twin-engine ship was on a routine cross-state trip to this B-29 base near Spokane when the Fairchild control tower lost radio contact.

Maj. MacFarland said the plane was carrying a pilot and a co-pilot.

Islander With Gloucesters Lives To Tell

VANCOUVER (CP) — A B.C. soldier who fought with the Royal Gloucesters, the British regiment almost wiped out in Korea last month, is reported to have survived the ordeal.

Sgt. Perrin served with the Canadian army during the Second World War. Later he was employed with the Department of Veterans' Affairs at Courtenay and was president of the Canadian Legion branch there before going to England.

Defence Plans For SE. Asia To Be Conned

SINGAPORE (AP) — High-level American, British and French military leaders will confer here within a few days.

Their closed-door talks may well be aimed at an over-all plan for Southeast Asia in the event of a sudden Communist assault.

The only official indication of the forthcoming talks is an announcement by Malcolm Macdonald, British Commissioner-General for Southeast Asia, that Gen. Jean de Lattre de Tassigny, French High Commissioner for Indo-China, will arrive in Singapore for a "social call" May 30.

It was learned, however, that Vice-Admiral Arthur D. Struble, commander of the United States First Fleet Commander, is among U.S. military officials expected to take part in the talks.

And Sir John Harding, British commander-in-chief of Far East land forces, is understood to have deferred a trip to Britain.

Rubber-Loaded Ship May Be Diverted From China

SINGAPORE (AP)—The freighter Nancy Moller, her holds jammed with 3,500 tons of Malayan rubber for Communist China, left Singapore today.

There still was a question whether she would be permitted to make the run to Whampoa in China's Kwantung Province, in view of Britain's announced ban on further rubber shipments to the Red Chinese.

The Nancy Moller, probably carrying the last of direct rubber shipments from Malaya to China, had permission for this cargo under licensing rules.

Meanwhile, Singapore and Malayan financial circles still buzzed with reaction on Britain's rubber ban. But the markets were closed today and will remain shut Sunday and Monday over the Whitsunday holiday.

Ceylon Not Asked To Stop Rubber To China

COLOMBO (Reuters)—Prime Minister Don Stephen Senanayake said today that Ceylon has not been asked to cut off strategic exports to Communist China.

The Premier said Ceylon was not contemplating "any action which would further depress the price of rubber." He said the government was studying means of stabilizing the price, which has fallen steadily in recent weeks.

(Sir Hartley Shawcross, Britain's Trade Minister, announced May 10 in London that Britain would ask the governments of Malaya and Borneo to ban rubber exports to Red China. He appealed to other rubber-producing countries to follow suit.)

Ceylon, now an independent country within the Commonwealth, is the world's fourth major rubber producing country. It turned out almost 100,000 tons in 1949.

Says Russia Has Up To 1,000 Subs

TAIPEH, Formosa (AP),—A Nationalist newspaper today said Russia has nearly 1,000 submarines, at least 200 of them in Far-Eastern waters.

Great China Daily News said the Port of Yulin, on the south coast of Hainan Island, is being converted into a major Russian submarine base.

Other pro-Nationalist reports recently said the Russians also built a submarine base at Tsingtao, in the North China province of Shantung.

WEATHERMAN SAYS RAIN FOR WEEK-END

Weatherman has predicted cloudy skies with sunny intervals for Greater Victoria this week-end.

Unsettled conditions in the Pacific will probably bring more rain to Victoria during the next 48 hours, the forecaster added, bringing a bit of gloom to picnic plans.

Rainfall in Victoria overnight was .17 of an inch, bringing the total precipitation for May to nine-tenths of an inch.

Protocol Satisfied, Geranium Slip Coming

The Lord Chamberlain's office at St. James Palace, London, advised Parks Administrator Herb Warren Friday that the bailiff of the Royal Parks would send a cutting shortly of the geranium "Gustav Amich."

The city parks department had written for a cutting, since the variety was unobtainable in the trade.

The geranium is grown in the beds in The Mall, facing Buckingham Palace. The cutting is a gift from the Ministry of Works, Lambeth Bridge House, London.

An exhibition of Victoria and other paintings by Llewellyn Petley Jones will open Tuesday for two weeks at the Victoria Art Centre, it was announced today.

These pictures on tour across Canada are in a fresh and legible style. Mr. Jones has won third prize in a National Exhibition in Montreal. He has painted several scenes of Victoria and other island places. The gallery hours are 1 to 5.30, Tuesday through Saturday.

Exhibitioin committee under Mrs. Ina Uhthoff has announced another popular non-jury show, entries for which will close on Saturday, May 26. It is an opportunity for Vancouver Island artists to show their current works under gallery conditions with a two-picture limit per exhibitor. Details may be had at the gallery, 823 Broughton Street.

Meet May Decide New Pact Members

LONDON (Reuters)—The foreign, defence and finance ministers of the 12 Atlantic Pact countries will probably meet this summer to discuss the admission of Greece and Turkey to full membership, diplomatic quarters here said today.

Deputies of the North Atlantic treaty organization now are consulting their governments about the possibility of holding such a meeting in July or August.

Democrat Bigwig In Tennessee Slain

BENTON, Tenn. (AP).—Three slow, deliberate shots from ambush late Friday night took the life of the head of the Polk County Democratic party.

The slaying of W. A. Lewis, 44, came against a backdrop of political strife which had left the county, situated in mountainous southeast Tennessee, without a functioning government for nearly three months.

Lewis was chairman of the County Court, restored as governing agency last February. An opposing faction, the Good Government League, had refused to surrender the power it won in a 1948 election which left three persons dead by violence.

MOOSE PUTS CITY ON BLINK

FAIRBANKS, Alaska (UP)—A big moose nursed "bruised" antlers today following a pitched battle with civilization that left this central Alaska city without communications for two hours and 10 minutes.

Alaska communications service maintenance men caught a glimpse of the moose as he freed his horns from torn and tangled wires and galloped off into the woods a few miles south of here.

BROKE CRIME RECORD

'Cat Burglar' Faces 48 More Entry Charges

Police officials of Greater Victoria today expressed the belief Phillip Vass Russell, 34, of 3284 Seaton Avenue, admitted "cat burglar," is facing the greatest number of court charges ever laid against anyone in the Victoria area.

Russell, whose five-year stretch of burglaries in Greater Victoria ended with his capture by Saanich police, has confessed to 48 charges of breaking and entering. In addition, 48 other charges not formally laid, are to be taken into consideration in his case.

Ten charges of breaking and entering and theft were laid in Oak Bay court Friday afternoon. There are 14 other cases laid to Russell in Oak Bay.

Constable Joseph Armstrong of Saanich police said the value of all the property the "cat burglar" stole throughout the area totals about $18,700, of which property worth $12,090 has been recovered.

He listed the value of stolen property in each municipality as follows: Oak Bay, $10,300; Saanich, $4,500; R.C.M.P. area, including Sidney, $2,800; Esquimalt, $900, and Victoria $200.

Magistrate H. C. Hall has remanded Russell to next Thursday and James J. Proudfoot, his counsel, served notice he would ask the court for a week's further adjournment for the purpose of compiling information to aid in determining sentence.

Funeral Rites For W. Stamford

Funeral services were held Friday for William Leonard Stamford, 68, who for 36 years served with the Federal Department of Transport. Before retirement in 1948, he was the department's agent in Victoria.

Born in Dundas, Ont., Mr. Stamford was a graduate of the University of Toronto and an associate member of the Canadian Society of Civil Engineers.

He is survived by his wife, at 41 Wellington Avenue; one daughter, Mrs. Victoria Hartman, and one son, Gordon Stamford, both in Victoria.

Six sons and two daughters are living still, four of the sons in Victoria. A charter member of the I.O.D.E., Mrs. Ricketts was prominent in many other local women's organizations. Marshall Refutes MacArthur's View

Truman Administration Winner Of Second Round In Great U.S. Debate

WASHINGTON (Reuters)—The Truman administration appeared today to have won the second round of the battle of the generals over the firing of Gen. MacArthur.

The first round was undoubtedly MacArthur's when the dismissed supreme Far Eastern commander startled the Senate investigating committees with a number of sensational charges and sweeping generalizations.

But the second round was the administration's, after Defence Secretary Marshall had testified for six grueling days.

Much of Marshall's testimony was a detailed and documented refutation of MacArthur's charges.

MacArthur claimed he was supported by the Joint Chiefs of Staff for at least some of his proposals to extend the war against the Chinese Communists beyond the Korean area.

Marshall revealed that MacArthur had omitted to mention that this claim was based on a working paper drawn up by the Joint Chiefs of Staff, at a time of crisis in Korea, outlining measures to be adopted only if the worst came.

NO GUIDANCE

MacArthur claimed that he had been left in a vacuum without guidance from President Truman on the policy to be followed after the entrance of the Communist Chinese into the war.

Marshall revealed a lengthy 11-point letter of guidance from Truman to MacArthur in January on this policy.

Apart from pointing up these alleged errors of fact, Marshall also posed several basic questions on which public opinion is more likely to favor Truman's answers than MacArthur's.

Most important was whether the risk of precipitating a third world war was implicit in MacArthur's proposals.

In effect, Marshall asked the committee and through them the American people to choose between these alternatives:

1. An expansion of the Korean war as advocated by MacArthur in the hope of a speedy victory, accompanied by the risk of the United States becoming isolated from its allies and the additional risk of precipitating a world war in which the U.S. would have to go it alone.

2. A continuation of the present limited war with the possibility that the Chinese Communists can be forced to sue for peace because of their own losses in Korea, or that the war may die down to a stalemate.

Hints Britain Still To Send Rubber To Reds

LONDON (UP)—Britain will continue exporting 7,000 tons of rubber a month to Russia, at least for the time being, despite her total ban on shipments to Communist China, informed sources said today.

These sources said Britain probably will reconsider soon her rubber export policy toward Russia and Russia's satellites, but there are no present plans for an all-out embargo.

At the same time, diplomatic quarters said other British Commonwealth nations are expected to join Britain soon in announcing support of American proposals in the United Nations for economic sanctions against China.

India was said to be the only Commonwealth nation which is likely to put off such acting. This would be in line with her policy of steering a middle course in the Far Eastern crisis.

Informants said exports to Russia are subject to licensing by the Board of Trade, which will examine each consignment "on its merits." According to current estimates, 7,000 tons of rubber will fill Russia's peace-time internal requirements.

A considerable quantity of rubber now is en route from the Far East to Britain for re-shipment to Russia, informed quarters said. These supplies were said to cover earlier purchases and contracts made before the licensing regulations went into effect two weeks ago.

Murder Charge In Vancouver Stabbing Case

VANCOUVER (CP) — Wilfred Lawrence Marshall, 35, last night was charged with attempted murder after his estranged wife was stabbed in the right side by a pocket knife.

Mrs. Louise Marshall, 33-year-old mother of three, is in serious condition in hospital. She was being given blood transfusions.

Police said Marshall came from Edmonton Thursday night. He had been living there with his parents and three children.

Cates, Daughter Injured When Car Overturns

INVERMERE (CP) — Labor Minister John Cates and his daughter were injured yesterday in an automobile accident near here. Their car turned over in Kootenay National Park.

Mr. Cates' arm was broken and his daughter, Mary Louise Cates, a nurse, received a broken collar-bone and broken wrist. Both are reported in good condition in hospital in Invermere, 250 miles east of Vancouver.

A second daughter, Ann, escaped uninjured.

The accident occurred at 3 Friday afternoon and the victims were admitted to hospital about four hours later.

Hospital authorities said they had difficulty finding beds for them.

CORONATION ANNIVERSARY MARKED HERE

Adding their echoes to others fired around the world, 21 guns at the Work Point saluting base overlooking the Straits of Juan de Fuca today boomed out at noon to mark the anniversary of the coronation of King George VI.

The salute, with guns discharging at 10-second intervals, followed a special parade led by Capt. N. G. Fletcher, R.C.A., and WO. 2 C. A. Cornfield, battery sergeant-major.

The firing party was from the Royal Canadian School of Artillery.

The tradition of observing the anniversary of the reigning sovereign's coronation has been observed at Work Point Barracks since their establishment before 1900.

PATS' COLONEL HOME

Goes To Sick Child After Speedy Flight

EDMONTON (CP)—Lt.-Col. J. R. Stone arrived at Edmonton airport at 12.05 p.m., M.S.T., today after a flight from Korea to the bedside of his two-year-old daughter, ill with a serious eye disease in an Edmonton hospital.

The Princess Patricias' commander in Korea was greeted at the airport by Maj.-Gen. Chris Vokes, General Officer Commanding Western Command.

Tired but calm, Col. Stone left immediately for the home of Edmonton friends where his wife has been staying and was to proceed from there to University Hospital to be with his daughter, whose right eye was removed Thursday.

Hospital officials said the condition of the daughter, Moira, was unchanged today. The optic nerve of her remaining eye is under observation.

It took Col. Stone about 70 hours to reach Edmonton. He left the front lines in Korea Wednesday night.

He first learned of his daughter's plight at his front-line post. He was granted immediate compassionate leave and top traveling priority home.

The two-year-old child—Moira—has already had her right eye removed at University Hospital here and doctors now fear her left eye might be affected as well.

Mrs. Stone, expecting her third child in July, said doctors believe Moira's right eye was affected by cancer.

Dr. A. C. McGugan, superintendent of University Hospital, said last night that the baby's condition is not immediately critical. He said no change in her condition is expected for several days.

The child was brought to Edmonton from her home in Salmon River, B.C., last Saturday.

Train, Tractor In Collision

SASKATOON (CP)—Canadian National Railways No. 2 transcontinental passenger train from Vancouver struck a farmer-driven tractor early today at a level crossing 15 miles east of Biggar, Sask.

The farmer, J. C. McGill of Keppell, was uninjured except for a cut on his right ear. It is believed he either jumped or was thrown clear.

60,000 Iranians Stage Violent Anti-U.S. Rally

Flay M'Arthur; Shout Approval Of Stalin

TEHRAN (UP)—An estimated 60,000 Iranians, massed before the U.S. Embassy, screamed their approval of Soviet Premier Joseph Stalin as "the standard-bearer of peace" in a violently anti-American rally last night.

Teen-age girls lifted their voices and clenched fists with the crowd in outbursts against American policy in Iran, Europe and the Far East.

A resolution approved at the end of the noisy but disturbance-free rally demanded expulsion of U.S. military advisers from Iran, "immediate prosecution" of Gen. Douglas MacArthur as a war criminal and diplomatic recognition of Red China.

One-Legged Bowler Rolls Perfect Game

GATINEAU, Que. (CP)—An avid bowler, Rene Lalonde, 34, had his left leg amputated six inches below the knee several years ago. With the help of an artificial leg, Lalonde kept up the game. Today he knocked off the kegler's dream: a perfect game. He rolled the 12 straight strikes for a 450 score in a five-pin tournament still under way.

'SWEET MUSIC' ON DIESELS

E. & N. Mechanics Make Strange Noises

"Well, blow me down! What on earth's going to happen next?"

This was the response of an E. & N. Railway shop employee today when a Victoria Daily Times reporter walked in to inform the railway that Ottawa wants E. & N. and other railway diesels to blow "sweet music" with their horns from now on.

The order, passed down from E. & N. bigwigs to mechanics, caused some grumbling and plenty of shop jokes.

The decree was handed down by the Board of Transport Commissioners and ordered that horns on "road" diesels on runs between cities be "tuned in chords of not less than three tones to produce a harmonious sound." This would eliminate "dissonant" horn-blowing, it was said.

Air-operated horns must now be made to sound like steam-engine whistles, the order also read. Mechanics made strange noises when this order was made known to them.

"Next thing they'll want us to fix the horns to whistle 'She'll Be Comin' 'Round the Mountain'," a shop worker commented.

Strategy And Tactics

ON THE LONG-TERM STRATEGY OF the Asiatic struggle the American Government and its critics remain far apart. On the short-term tactics the gap between them has been substantially narrowed by the recent testimony of General MacArthur and General Marshall before a Congressional committee.

Strategically the MacArthur thesis remains unchanged—the United States, if necessary "going it alone," must risk a great war in Asia even at the expense of breaking the grand alliance and leaving Europe defenceless. The strategy of the Government also is unchanged—to avoid a great war in Asia and to regard Europe as the core of the world struggle.

But tactically three large items of dispute have been virtually removed and a fourth is nearing compromise.

General MacArthur has always insisted that Formosa must be held and his supporters have been led to believe that the Government was ready to abandon it. General Marshall's testimony shows that the Government intends as much as its critics to hold Formosa. No dispute exists there.

Secondly, the Government has been accused, even by General MacArthur, of attempting to bring Communist China into the United Nations, as Britain has so long urged. Undoubtedly the Government had leaned toward this course before the Korean war and a majority of the United Nations certainly was determined on it. Today the Government is even ready to veto the election of China and a majority of the United Nations probably is unwilling to recognize a regime which has been indicted as an aggressor. That point of friction also has been removed.

Thirdly, the United Nations appear ready to follow General MacArthur's advice and blockade China. To satisfy the United States, Britain already has halted all rubber exports from Malaya to China. Further steps doubtless will follow. On the question of blockade—though the details will take some working out—the great allies appear to be re-united.

On a fourth issue unity of purpose also is being achieved. While unwilling to take the initiative as General MacArthur urges, and risk all-out war not only with China but with Russia, the United States Government and its allies are ready to bomb Manchuria if the enemy uses strong air power in the Korean war. That adventure, if the Chinese intend to drag us into it, may lie just ahead and may decide whether a world war is to break out this year.

But on the fifth point of dispute—the use of Chiang Kai-shek's troops on the mainland—the American Government, like the Governments of Britain and Canada, have not yielded an inch. They believe that to support the Nationalists would be to antagonize fatally the whole of Asia. They believe also that once Chiang landed on the mainland he would soon need reinforcements of western armies and hence the west would be sucked by stages into the great Asiatic war which they seek to avoid.

To all of which General MacArthur replies that the west has left only a "vacuum" of policy in Korea, where it cannot win anything but a stalemate. This General Marshall denies. There is a policy in Korea. It is to destroy the Chinese armies, convince China that aggression does not pay, restore South Korea, enforce the writ of the United Nations and then negotiate a local settlement which will free the West for the defence of Europe.

Whether this policy can work the next few months or weeks should show. Whether it has the support of a majority of Americans is not yet clear but unquestionably it has the support of all the United States' allies. To abandon it in favor of larger risks, the United States, as General Marshall indicates, must break clean with the friends essential to its own safety. It is for that break that Russia has been fishing all along, Korea being only the bait.

Paying For Protection

WHILE THE RESULTS OF THE lengthy economic conference at Torquay have fallen far short of original expectations, the announcement of certain reciprocal tariff reductions between Canada and the United States gives an indication of what might have been accomplished on a larger scale.

By the latest agreement, the Canadian tariffs on confectionery, grapefruit juice, household furniture and several types of electrical appliances will be decreased, enabling us to buy at lower prices. On the other side, the United States will lower its customs levies on lead and zinc, Douglas fir plywood and some other products. The American concessions are viewed as encouragement to British Columbia industry, widening our market.

The question that will strike the average consumer first is why this process is not extended on a much larger scale. The answer is not a simple one. Customs revenue is a considerable factor in the national budget, although it suffers the disadvantages of all indirect levies. The classic "infant industries" argument—that new industries in Canada must be protected by tariff walls until they get on their economic feet—usually evolves into a permanent bonus on home production which consumers must pay. Some "infants" achieve a ripe old age. The "vested interests" argument supplants it. This takes the form of insisting that reduction or removal of tariffs will destroy the investment of home capital, wipe out local payrolls and otherwise disrupt the economy. It can in some cases be truthfully supported.

But most of these reasonings lose sight of the purpose of trade—which is to obtain products in exchange for your own products at the best possible price. Interference with that basic principle results in higher costs to the consumer. It becomes a question of how much extra he is prepared to pay to maintain the status quo.

Crossing Senate Party Lines

BY HIS OWN STATEMENTS ON DIFferent occasions, Prime Minister Louis St. Laurent has indicated clearly his belief in the need for Senate reform. Supported in that view by the action of two Liberal members of the Upper Chamber this week, the Prime Minister may be encouraged to advance toward that objective. The senators, Leon Gouin of Montreal, and J. W. deB. Farris of Vancouver, have advocated the strengthening of opposition ranks.

At present there are 79 Liberals in the Senate, and 10 Progressive Conservatives. Thirteen seats are vacant. If precedent were followed, those vacancies would be filled by Liberal appointments, thereby increasing the serious disequilibrium of an agency of government that does important work and could fill an even more important role if a few changes were made.

The top-heavy Liberal membership is easily understood. It is the product of appointments by a government which has been Liberal—with little more than the five-year interruption of the Bennett regime—since 1921. As members selected by Conservatives during their terms in office have died, replacements have automatically come from the ranks of those favored by Liberals.

Mr. St. Laurent has shown a recognition of national interests far transcending party lines. He would, of course, be subject to violent criticism within Liberal ranks at local levels were he to ignore precedent in future selections. Not would choosing Progressive Conservatives automatically eliminate the need for further reforms. However, the action of the two senators, one from Quebec the other from British Columbia, gives him a first class opportunity to look about for good men, minimizing the importance of their party affiliations in an effort to secure excellence in membership in the Upper Chamber.

Chips Off The Old Brock

By DAVID BROCK

WELL, my sons and daughters, tomorrow is Mother's Day. The one day in the year when you like your mothers, is it? The one day in the year when you do anything for them? And even then, you only do it because fashion compels you? And even then, you can only express your thoughts with flowers, candy, and ready-made cards . . . cards composed by some young hack who doesn't even know you and your ma? Put on those terms, Mother's Day seems a bad business all round. And if partly unfair, those terms are also partly fair enough. But I dare say we could put it better if we said it is the one day in the year when you feel ashamed of not having done more all the other days. Which might make Mother's Day rather useful, at that.

Brock

AT any rate, no matter how shy this very public festival makes you feel, you needn't blame the poor old Americans for it. The Americans may feel they should take the blame, but they are wrong. I have even been told in print, several times, the name of the fine old American lady who invented the feast, and invented it just a generation or two ago. I admit that having it on the second Sunday in May is an innovation, but the rest of it is very old. It is simply the old English "Mothering Sunday," which is also Mid-Lent Sunday. On Mothering Sunday, you visited your parents and exchanged gifts and (I dare suppose) blessings. And since Mid-Lent Sunday was also the day for eating simnel cakes, you brought your mother some of those and helped her eat them. I use the past tense here, for I fancy Mothering Sunday has pretty well died out in England, except in the remotest districts . . . died out along with simnel cakes.

I WANT to start a new custom for Father's Day, and it might do equally well on Mother's Day. It is a very simple custom, and consists merely of getting out the First Act of King Lear and reading it to the assembled parents and children . . . you remember the part . . . where poor foolish old Lear was dividing up his kingdom among his daughters according to the way they flattered him, and where Cordelia, the only decent one of the lot, suddenly rebelled at this crazy boasting-match. I have never quite seen why it was necessary for Cordelia to wound the old idiot. After all, she was the only one who loved him, and she might have spared his senile feelings a bit. But I'd have enjoyed her views on Mother's Day. I'd also enjoy hearing what the florists and confectioners might think of Cordelia. The Board of Trade must have hated Cordelia cordially.

SCIENCE, HOORAY!

THE OTHER day I was talking to a man who tunes all the pianos in a large establishment in a city some distance from here. (I cannot be more explicit for fear of wounding the feelings of the engineers whom I'll mention in a minute. But I assure you the story is true.) These pianos are tuned once a week, and my friend has been caring for them tenderly for many years. A few years ago he began to notice that his nice clean pianos were getting simply filthy. Each week he'd remove dust, grit, oil-film, and heaven knows what. And the next week they'd be as dirty as ever.

SINCE he'd never seen such a frightful change come over a building, he made some inquiries. And he found that the building had installed a nice new air-conditioning plant. Only by some little mistake, it was what he called "air-conditioning in reverse." That is to say, this wonderful feat of applied science was a costly plant which sucked all the dust and oil fumes and everything else off a busy and dirty street, and pumped all this rubbish through the building.

And while this was just a little mistake, the kind of mistake any of us could make, still, the thing cannot be altered now, and must go on for ever. Or so my friend claims. Good old science.

MUD IN YER EYE

"SOME day Canadian whisky will become the world drink," says an official of a Canadian distillery. His firm is now selling rye in France, Mexico, and a dozen other unlikely spots. Now, I'd rather see a Mexican drinking rye than tequila or pulque (if that is how you spell them). But I'd rather see him drinking wine than rye. As for the picture of a Frenchman reaching for rye instead of for the world's finest wines . . . well, I don't cry easily, but if you can see my shoulders shaking, please don't fancy it s with laughter. No, sir, that's sobbing.

Being A Chronicle Of Our Times

MONDAY, 7th—This day the Lieutenant-Governor came to bless our new place of business, and amid much cheerful company we drank his health, and pray'd the new press would work. Which it would not, until many mechanicks leap't on it, and kick't it, and basted it, and cursed, and Lord! here was confusion doubly confounded. Our journals were late, and I was in a sad taking, as many poore boys went without their suppers that the news might be delivered, and I bless God for these loyal rascals. So wearily to bed, with an ake in me gizzard from the worry.

TUESDAY, 8th—Waked this morning at 4 o'clock, and unable to regain sleep, rose early. My wife, poor wretch, found that our hot-water tank had burst, and was leaking, whereupon I ordered a new one, but, at great expense of £60. At my office there is much taradiddle, but it will come right in the end. To my club, for lunch with Dr. Johns and Fred English, educators of renown, and discourse of a plan wherein we will sell 1,000 tickets to the symphony, all by budget. This day I did carry money out, and paid several debts. By and by, to Broad Street for a symphony meeting, where came Walter Stenner with gauze over his eye, having pierced a corner with a clothes-line, but cheerful withal that our deficit decreases. Anon came Master Hans Gruber, attired in a fine camlot coat of brown, and mighty merry that his vacation begins the morrow. Then home to read "The Provincials," a new book by an old classmate, John Cornish, very witty and stylish, and a first novel of immense promise.

WEDNESDAY, 9th—My breakfast was a boiled egg, half consumed by my girl, who has a most vexsome habit: while refusing to eat her own food, she delights in taking mine, and in such winsome manner that I cannot baste her for't. To my place of business, where much ado. Thence to the hotel, where I chatted betimes with Master Hugh Stephen, a gentle pleasing fellow who remains a journalist at heart, tho' he is reputed most successful with a new method of laundry. His Excellency Stanley Woodward, a man of most handsome bearing, spoke forthrightly of affairs which threaten war to this hemisphere. Anon came Alex Fisher, an alderman from across the water, to shake hands with his fraternity brother, Frederick Hinke, whose Alma Mater is old Hamilton College. At the cry of "Fire," we repaired to lawn to witness a most merry burning of oil and paint across the harbor. But it did little damage. My chauffeur was in a sad taking and grumbled that there'd been no good fire in this town since the Cameron mill burned in 1932. At my office, smoked a cigar, which gave me an ake, and I am very foolish, indeed. Thence home, much admiring my carriage, which had been wash'd. I put on me bibbing trews, and my wife a dress of black crepe, with a straw hat large enough to hold a dozen eggs, and we went to the home of Scoop and Bimbi Cameron, where were gathered many splendid ladies and gentlemen. In their garden grow the most handsome azaleas in this city, of fiery hue. At home came a message by wire from Master Gruber, he gravely distraught by a report of certain criticisms of an orchestra across the water. He would make a publick proclamation, to set it right, and seem'd in great distress, but I told him to take a tonick, and rest content.

* * *

THURSDAY, 10th—Up early, and showered with steaming hot water from my new tank, which doth please me greatly. To my office, where came calling Master Joe Foley of Powell River, who supplies some 200 journals with newsprint, and at £35 a ton, which is a splendid reckoning. Thence to my club where I listened to an address, which I found stylized and dull, and it vexed me to the blood. Chatted anon with Master William Pinfold, but he did not eat, most sensibly proclaiming that he ate only when hungry. Instead, he lit a most curious hookah, fashioned of aluminum, which will be useful when 'tis invented. By carriage to Eaton's with Master William Gilmour, he proudly displaying a new floor which will offer household furniture, drapes, tapestries and rugs, and other articles of fashion. My supper was a cold chine of beef, most exquisite when seasoned with mustard. Anon came Master Hutchison, fresh from Ottawa, with brisk intelligence of capital affairs, well worth hearing. By and by I made shift to slumber.

* * *

FRIDAY, 11th—Lay late abed, enjoying the drizzle of the gentle raynes, which do refresh me garden. Before my tub, stepped on the scayles, and Lord! how me girth do decrease. For breakfast I took a tonick. To my office, where my head was full of business, and I purchased two handsome desks from Master Gordon Wood, at a reckoning of £70. By carriage with Capt. Eustace Brock to His Majesty's Navy, where I listened to a foolish speech, in which 'twas postulated that women, Ods' Blood, could do the duty of men in this ancient and revered service. Chatted betimes with Cmdr. Mac Leeming, who informed me of a plan for the education of 250 sea cadets, which I am mighty glad of. At the office, comes to me Don Barry, a towering rogue from across the water, and we chatted of times past. My supper was a sole with piquant sauce. Anon to the theatre to witness a comedy, "Three Knaves Called Michael," which proved bubbly stuff, of a mirth fit for students, but I am mighty pleased with Mistress Wyman in the leading role. Thus, my eyes aking from too much whirl, home and to bed.

U.S. Shows Difference Of Opinion On Destiny

By WALTER LIPPMANN, from Washington

THIS must surely be the first time in all human experience that a people has conducted a council of war in the presence of its actual and possible enemies. The hearings, to be sure, are not open to television and the transcript of the testimony is being subjected to a certain amount of censorship. But what is being censored must be of little interest let us say to Moscow and to Peiping, as compared with what is being brought out.

Lippmann

The censor is deleting certain military facts and estimates which, assuming that they are not known, would enable our adversaries to measure more accurately the efficiency of our intelligence services and of their own. The censor is not deleting the conflicting war plans and conflicting political ideals over which this country, and even its professional military leaders, are so bitterly divided.

Whatever the outcome of this public council of war—this farthest north in super-publicity, this unique case of open strategy openly arrived at—Moscow and Peiping will know it as soon as we do.

They know what Gen. MacArthur and the Republicans would do if they could get the better of President Truman and the Democrats. They have weeks, perhaps months, to work out their reply in case the MacArthur policy wins out. They know also, more or less accurately, what President Truman intends not to do, if he can rebut the MacArthur party. They can choose to make it hard or easy for the Truman policy; they can play the war to get whatever result they think is desirable, to entangle us more or to entangle us less, knowing at all times as much about our intentions as we know ourselves.

The controversy itself covers a lot of ground and turns on a series of great issues. Some of them are deep and far-reaching. When the General was speaking it seemed at times that there was at issue the very conception of the American destiny. Is the American destiny now an imperial destiny? Or is it the American destiny to be the protector and promoter of the Atlantic community and of the Western civilization which is at home within it?

At the bottom of the whole controversy, which did not begin this year, or last year, but has smoldered on since long before the world war, there is a profound conflict of view about what is the American destiny.

This conflict is older than MacArthur and Marshall and Truman, not to speak of Taft and Knowland and Wherry. It goes back at least as far as the Spanish-American war and the conquest of the Philippines. It is not going to be settled soon, and we shall be arguing it for a long time to come.

As we argue it we should realize that it is a great, indeed a noble, controversy. It turns upon whether, like all its predecessors in the days when they rose to power, the U.S. must become, and wish to become, the master of an empire which it rules for its own glory and for the empire's benefit—or whether Americans wish to be the first servants of a community of free nations, all of them, the big and the small alike, the heirs and the custodians of that Western civilization which originated in the Mediterranean and has expanded about the Atlantic Ocean.

But though this controversy—the truly great and enduring American debate—cannot be settled and concluded in these hearings, or in the next election, it is, I believe, the necessary context for understanding Gen. MacArthur's views and the opposition to them.

INCALCULABLE RISKS

The incalculable risks—incalculable by his own admission—which Gen. MacArthur wishes to accept by making war on China are simply incomprehensible if nothing more is at stake than to bring about a cease-fire in Korea and the withdrawal from Korea of the Chinese—and presumably also the American—armies.

The risks that Gen. MacArthur wishes to take become comprehensible only in the context of the General's vision—his vision of the Pacific Ocean as an American lake and of Japan as lying within the sphere of American power and of China, with Chiang restored, as brought within the American sphere of influence.

The General's proposal to risk a third world war in order to end the war in Korea sounds, when one first hears it, like a case of wishing to burn down the barn to roast the pig. The risks are fantastically greater than any advantage that could be got out of taking them.

But his proposals take on a different look if we recognize that his objective is American paramountcy in the Far East—in Japan, Korean, and China. That would be, that has often been, the kind of objective, worth a world war, which empire builders have worked for. But there will be many of us, most of us I truly believe, who think the prospect of such an empire a dreary one, likely to destroy not only freedom, as we have known it, but also the desire to use power generously.

Let 'Em Jump!

Montreal Star

Sharing neither in the prestige of his uniform, the authority that goes with it nor in his long years of experience as a traffic expert on high technical planes, we hereby (if he will permit) stick our neck out beside the neck of traffic inspector Armand Girard and loudly echo his assertion (reported in The Herald) that women are better car drivers than men.

Inspector Girard, that brave man, says that the last time he made this declaration he was jumped on from all sides. Let 'em jump We can take it. Moreover we challenge observers on foot and such male drivers (if there are any) as can maintain an objective outlook to embark on a sustained survey for a month and then report to us how many driving imbecilities, and just ordinary stupidities, they can fairly attribute to women and how many to men drivers, keeping of course as accurate a record as possible of the numbers of each observed. We bet the women win.

The World Today Has A Multitude Of Wants But Too Many Of Us Want The Wrong Things

By FRANK S. MORLEY

EVERY NOW and then I come across a new "want." This time it is new coins—2½ cent, 7½-cent and 12½-cent coins. Edward Mehren maintains that these coins will save the American public $5,000,000,000 a year, which makes a saving of $35 for every man, woman and child in the United States, a saving of $14,000,000 a day.

The point is that when the product cannot profitably be sold for a nickel, the price jumps to the next convenient coin, a dime, while the 10-cent products jump to 15 cents. Coinage was designed for convenience.

GOOD CASE

It makes a good case. The coinage hasn't been changed in 50 years. Inflation hits everything else, so why not the nickel and the dime?

Nevertheless I am a bit weary of our multitudinous wants. I know that there is such a thing as "divine dissatisfaction," but are we sure all our wants are divine? William Blake, in a famous drawing, depicts a ladder reaching far into the sky, like Jacob's ladder. At the foot of the ladder flowers are blooming, birds are singing, and children are playing. A man with eyes turned away from these lovely things is climbing the ladder. Blake entitled his drawing, "I want."

Many people turn their eyes away from life's best goods and choice treasures because they are chasing some want. The streets are full of eyes haunted and hungry with frustrated dissatisfaction. I remember a song, "I'm waiting for ships that never come in, watching and waiting in vain." Now most of us have the material for a heaven if we would use it.

One thing we want badly is a gift of appreciation, of gratitude. "I complained about my shoes until I met a man who had no feet," runs a good proverb.

POWERFUL MEDICINE

Another legitimate want is faith. Dr. Paul DuBois, one of our great psychotherapists, maintains that "religious faith is the best preventive against the maladies of the soul, mind, and body, and it is the most powerful medicine we have discovered for curing them."

We truly want more discipline. The worship of the Goddess of License has driven us mad. There are no rules any more. Man has written his own Ten Commandments, the first of which is, "Enjoy yourself." The freedom we have sought has been not the freedom to serve the highest, the freedom to obey conscience, the freedom to worship the true God.

FLOUT DECENCIES

Freedom has come to mean a freedom to worship no God, to destroy conscience, to be completely selfish. In the name of freedom we flout the ancient decencies and deride the high moralities, until nothing sacred, nothing stately and lovely, is left. We have described freedom as a movement that released us from obligation, not a movement that established obligation. We sought freedom from duty, not freedom for duty.

The sort of liberty we sought has been a hollow mockery of the thing for which Hus died at the stake and for which Bunyan declared he would remain in jail until moss grew on his eyebrows.

Perhaps we only really want one thing—true religion. Thus the little boy was right in repeating the Twenty-third Psalm, "The Lord is my shepherd; that's all I want." Happy little boy!

Vancouver To Hit Gamblers Harder

Newspaper Report Links Big U.S. Bookmakers With Mainland Set-up

VANCOUVER (CP)—With a clean bill of moral health from the Police Commission, Police Chief Walter Mulligan and his force today stepped up their campaign to get the "higher-ups" in Vancouver's bookmaking racket.

At the same time, the Sun said in a front-page story that big-time bookmakers in the United States plan to link Vancouver into a new system or race news communication to "foil the dread Kefauver committee."

"Basis of the new system is the flashing of news from U.S. tracks to points in Canada, where it would be carried legally over telegraph lines and then fed back into the U.S. by wire or telephone," the Sun said.

"The U.S. bookmakers are planning the communication system because they fear passage of a U.S. law prohibiting interstate transmisison of racing information, life-blood of their multi-million-dollar industry."

Friday night, the Vancouver Police Commission gave Chief Mulligan and his force a unanimous vote of confidence.

The chief asked for the vote after disclosure that Vancouver has a $3,000,000-a-year bookmaking racket, operators "making book" on Canada and U.S. tracks.

Stewart McMorran, assistant city prosecutor, was asked to appear before the commission after he reported earlier to City Council that bribery of public officials was "a possibility" when "such large sums of money were involved in bookmaking."

Mr. McMorran, who is seeking wider power in prosecution of gamblers, told the commission Friday that he had not intended to cast and doubt on the honesty of any member of the force.

He had simply told aldermen "just what could evolve from large-scale bookmaking."

Chief Mulligan said last week a drive had been started to nab the top men in the bookmaking racket here.

Famous Canadian Army Surveyor Debunks Headless Valley Tales

Sapper G. A. Lester, Victoria, and Sgt. B. W. Donahoe, Chemainus, will be members of the army survey party to leave for the north this month headed by a man who passed through much-shunned Headless Valley in the Northwest Territories.

Their leader is R.S.M. L. G. McAdam, Ottawa, veteran surveyor with the army's survey establishment. Last year he ran a survey through the famed valley of the South Nahanni River.

Many men have ventured into Headless Valley, also known as "Deadman's Valley," some of them not to return. Those who returned spread weird tales of the "things" they have seen. Natives shun the place.

NOTHING FEARFUL

But there's nothing fearful, dreadful or particularly shocking about the place. At least McAdam's party saw nothing to be alarmed about.

"It's a lot of bunk," McAdam says. "Sure the headless bodies of the murdered McLeod brothers were discovered there years ago, but no one beheaded them. Animals carted the heads away after decomposition set in, that's all."

"We were through the place, even camped there," he said. "No one bothered us. Anyway, we still have our heads." McAdam will lead a party of 41 on 10 different surveys in lesser known northern regions this year as the long task of completing the mapping of Canada from aerial photographs continues.

HOME GARDEN

by Jack Rosefall

Situated on Richmond Road is a large building known as the Veterans' Hospital. Behind the building, and wil be news to many home gardeners, a piece of land has been set aside as a garden for the use of patients.

This plot, together with a greenhouse, provides healthful recreation in the open air, and a hobby of definite tonic value to those whose sphere of activity is limited.

At least one patient is, by trade, a professional gardener, and many others have known the joy of a home garden and are still interested in growing vegetables, fruit and flowers.

To operate such a garden necessitates securing of planting stock, and this is somewhat of a problem to the patients. There have been, and still are, those who take it upon themselves to donate within their means, and their assistance is greatly appreciated.

At the moment they are in need of some gladiolus bulbs, and some dahlia tubers of the smaller varieties suitable for indoor decoration when cut. Needless to say it is imperative that the stock be clean, healthy and of good quality; and because of the pride taken in this garden, named varieties will be greatly appreciated.

Home gardeners who are able to help in this worthy project should communicate with the recreational supervisor, A. E. Mourant, telephone, Beacon 4221, from whom further information may be obtained.

No Place To Hide In Atomic Attack

Canada Gets Warning From Health Minister; Must Tap All Resources

OTTAWA (CP)—Canadians were told Thursday it will not be possible to provide complete protection in the event of an atomic war.

Health Minister Martin said in the Commons that it will be impossible, even using all Canada's manpower and resources, to provide "anything like complete protection for the civilian population through civil defence." Moreover, what can be done must fall short of what people might like to see, he said.

Mr. Martin, who recently assumed responsibility for civil defence, made his statements during the fourth day of a debate on the government's $1,879,000,000 defence program for 1951-52. Civil defence expenditures will account for $4,200,000 of the total.

Federal planning, said Mr. Martin, is well advanced. Some hundreds of key instructors have been trained. He stressed the importance of local planning and said arrangements have been worked out with the provinces and the United States.

Dr. W. G. Blair (P.C., Larnark, Quebec) charged Canada's preparations exist on paper and said the country should be much further advanced in view of authoritative statements that war would bring a rain of atomic bombs on this continent.

Must Train First-Aid Men

Dr. Blair said the world situation has reached the stage where Canada must do something about protection of the civilian population or wait until something has happened. A major first job was the training of people to handle casualties, a job that would take months.

Joseph Noseworthy (C.C.F., York South, Ont.) asked what is being done about communities such as Toronto where a single bomb might destroy a concentration of hospitals.

Mr. Martin said his officials are conscious of that problem. They have consulted with United States experts and transmitted their views to the Ontario authorities.

Mr. Martin said the federal government will assume responsibility for providing supplies and equipment under 15 main headings. These include co-operation with the United States and the provinces, provision of warning systems, protection against sabotage, research and development, provision of training aids, respirators, supply of sirens for communities of more than 20,000 persons, stock-piling of medical supplies and other fields.

The Department of Transport has established a special section to prepare plans to keep Canada's communications facilities going in war.

At another stage of the defence debate, members voted 90 to 35 against a proposals by George Drew, Progressive Conservative leader, that a special committee be established to study the estimates of defence expenditures.

'EXPLOSIVE' SILK PANTS FORBIDDEN IN ARSENAL

LA PORTE, Ind. (AP)—Troubles ranged from powder explosions to a sell-out of cotton panties here this week.

Kingsbury Ordnance Works officials were pretty sure the little explosions on their shell-loading lines were caused by static electricity. But what was causing that?

But shoenails, they found, nor buckles, nor hairpins, nor rings.

But one foreman's homework disclosed that women's silk lingerie could generate sparks.

So the order went out to Kingsbury's 1,200 women—bras, panties and slips must be cotton.

That stopped the little blasts, but La Porte and Michigan City stores ran out of cotton panties.

Parksville Banker Plans Retirement

Wet Feet As Bowen Island Craft Collide

VANCOUVER (CP) — Twenty-one commuters to Bowen Island escaped with little more than wet feet Friday night after their ferry boat collided with a larger boat at nearby Horseshoe Bay.

The collision occurred between the 30-foot Semina of the Saanie Ferries and the 100-foot Hollyburn, as both boats were backing away from their berths.

Eyewitnesses said that after the port side of the Semina was staved in by the Hollyburn, Semina's captain, E. Davis, of Bowen Island, threw the craft into full speed ahead back to the wharf.

Most passengers were able to step ashore with their baggage. The boat later filled with water and partially sank at the dock. Passengers were taken to Bowen Island by the Hollyburn and another Saanie ferry.

BARMAID JILT CAUSED ARSON

KING'S LYNN, Eng. (Reuters) — Dennis Ashworth's barmaid girl friend refused to see him after a quarrel, so he set the hotel on fire and smoked her out, the court was told Friday. A guest found the corridor full of smoke and flames 15 feet high. "If you say I done it, I must have done it," police said Dennis told them.

Requests Rezoning

E. N. Bagshawe, realtor, has asked the city to re-zone the southeast corner of Pandora and Camosun Street, from single family to commercial, stating the property now vacant, would be a good site for stores or an apartment.

Today through the light shed upon the twenty-third Psalm by the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, its promise brightens into practical fulfillment.

Supply, health — whatever is legitimately needful—is available to man without fail, and comes through the spiritual understanding of God, divine Love, which Christian Science brings.

Anyone who thoughtfully studies Science and Health and puts its teachings to the test in his daily life will find the "still waters" of the Bible promise.

Chinese Reds Came In Waves With Weird Shouts Of 'Canada Banzai'

The following account of Canadian action in Korea was delayed by censorship regulations which prevented the release of unit identifications during a critical period.

By BILL BOSS

WITH THE CANADIANS IN KOREA (CP)—Six-foot four-inch Pte. Kenneth Barwise of Vancouver joked:

"There sure were a lot of strangers in hell that morning." There sure were.

Chinese and North Korean April 26—the day after a company of the P.P.C.L.I. under Capt. Wally Mills of Winnipeg halted the Chinese spring offensive in their small sector by calling artillery fire down on their own positions—numbered more than 100.

Fifty were in the field of fire of a Vickers machine-gun manned by Ptes. Maurice Carr of Niagara Falls, Ont., and Bruce MacDonald of Peterborough, Ont., who were killed at their posts, still firing at onrushing hordes.

Six were felled by Barwise, a hefty, nonchalant soldier who wears size 14 boots, with a variety of weapons including two taken from killed Chinese.

Korean Houseboys In Fight

Ten died under the sights of two Korean houseboys who stayed in a slit trench near Carr and MacDonald, shooting their U.S. Army carbines until they ran out of ammunition.

Eleven were killed by fire from a platoon under Lieut. Mike Levy of Vancouver and from a section led by L. Cpl. Jim Waniandy of Fort McMurray, Alta.

Twenty-seven were ripped to death in the company area by artillery shrapnel and uncounted more died on the forward approaches—still held by the enemy when the Canadians were relieved in the line.

The action was north of Kapyong in the west central sector, when the Canadians occupied a mile-long series of 3,000-foot mountains northwest of the villages of Kail and Cheryong and guarding the vital Seoul-Chunchon road.

The Chinese had struck the South Korean 6th Division with the full weight of their long-expected offensive, and the Koreans in 25 hours had given up 20 miles of good defensive country which the Patricias had helped take during the preceding two weeks.

Pats Thrown In To Plug Hole

Thrown into the line to shore up the breach, the Patricias' stand the night of April 24-25 followed a furious daylight battle on lower ground to the west where the Middlesex Regiment and the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders first bogged down the enemy advance.

Stalled in the low terrain, the enemy concentrated his attack that night on the hills — and struck the Patricias.

Mills and his men had seen the enemy mass for the attack during the evening. Carr and MacDonald then began a stand that ended in a fight to the death, their position overrun.

The two machine-gunners' initial harrassing fire had been so effective down a draw that represented the enemy's easiest avenue of approach that from the begining of the actual attacks, which later came in wave upon wave, the enemy was determined to take them out.

He did, but at a terrible cost.

Waniandy, section leader in a platoon commanded by Sgt. Vern Holligan, St. Catharines, Ont., said:

"First of all there was a bugle call. It must have been their forming-up signal. It came from a point about 100 yards from the top on their side of the ridge.

"Then there was a sound like the beating of sticks. Maybe they were hollow bamboo rods slapped against one another. I don't know what they were for.

"That was followed by the blowing of shrill whistles. There were four different tones, one with a vibrating sound something like a tuning fork. That was their signal for the attack.

"They came in with a shout, like a screaming jabber."

Barwise interjected, supported by Pte. Pete Boldt of Simcoe, Ont.:

"They rushed in shouting 'Canada Banzai.' They tell me that's Japanese for 'Bravo Canada.' Maybe they were trying to confuse us."

Waniandy continued:

"By that time they were within 50 feet of us.

"I told the boys to let them come closer before opening up. I within 15 feet of the top before they could touch us and I didn't want the fellows to empty their magazines too soon.

"When they were close enough we opened up with our Brens (light machine-guns) and rifles. We saw them falling all over."

The Chinese attack was supported by mortar fire from the hillside, which the Canadians were unable to get at.

Most of the Canadians' casualties were caused by mortar and grenades. Total cost to the battalion was ten killed and 21 wounded, included casualties to a company commanded by Maj. Vince Lilley of Hamilton, which fought the Chinese to a standstill that night.

Prominent Citizens Direct Salvation Army Drive

Current campaign of Salvation Army to raise $30,000 for necessary service work here was one week old today. Hope of citizens' campaign committee is that drive will be over its objective in 14 more days. Committee members, left to right, front row: D. L. MacLaurin, Miss Jacqueline Smith, Mrs. C. S. Henley, Maj. C. J. Milley, Ray Morrison; back row: Henry Watson, Walter S. Miles, W. R. McIntyre, general chairman; D. S. Tuck and Dick Batey.

Named To Aid In Four Island Labor Disputes

W. T. McLaughlin, Victoria conciliation officer, has been named to assist in four labor disputes which have arisen over new working agreements sought by employees.

Employers are: A. W. Luney, Victoria; Alert Service Transfer Co. Ltd., Victoria; eight construction firms of Courtenay and the King's Daughters' Hospital, Duncan.

In the Luney dispute, the Bridge, Structural and Ornamental Ironworkers, Local 97, is requesting a 25 cents hourly wage increase.

General Teamsters' Union, Local 885, is in dispute with Alert Service over a request for an hourly wage rate of $1.07 for drivers of the company's mail trucks.

In the Courtenay construction industry dispute, the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners is seeking a wage increase of 32 cents an hour.

And at the Duncan hospital, the Hospital Employees' Federal Union, Local 180, is asking for wage increases, changes in hours of work, annual vacations and other terms and conditions of employment, for approximately 35 lay employees.

Naval Vets To Meet

May Detect Delinquents

CINCINNATI (AP)—A possible means of detecting potential delinquents among children has been described to the American Psychiatric Association.

Two University of Minnesota psychologists Friday described a "personality inventory" test used in studying 4,000 ninth-grade students and in classifying them as to potentialities for juvenile delinquency.

Doctors Elio D. Monachesi and Starke R. Hathaway said police court records later showed that 597 had had contacts with Juvenile Court either before or after being tested.

They said "there is a greater likelihood for boys to get into trouble than girls."

TEE TOPICS

By BILL WALKER

For some it will be like moving from their country estate into a duplex, but for the majority it will mean finding their little home in the country after years in the old family mansion.

That's the way the new clubhouse at Colwood, now in its growing pains, strikes one at first glance

Accompanied by secretary Derek Rhys-Jones we made a tour of the shell of the new clubhouse Friday, and were quite impressed with what we saw.

Walker

As is fairly common knowledge among the divot clientele that Royal Colwood is at present going through the embryo stages of a "new deal." The old clubhouse, which was opened just about 20 years to the date, will on Aug. 15 be turned over to the Catholic Sisterhood to be used as a "rest home for the aged."

* * *

Sale of the grand old premises, once one of the golfing landmarks of the Pacific Northwest, necessitated the construction of more modern and economical quarters.

* * *

The deal was consummated early this year and construction of the new building began just five weeks ago.

The gravel for the roadbed," he told us, "came from the excavation at the clubhouse site."

Colwood, it seems, once was an old river bed and after one gets through the top soil it's almost solid gravel as deep as one cares to probe.

* * *

This of course means a terrific saving in the construction of the road which runs about a quarter of a mile in from the Island Highway, about 500 yards north of the present entrance.

"The road will be black-topped by midsummer," Derek said, "and we hope to have the car park at least ready for use about the same time."

* * *

A general description of the clubhouse, which for the benefit of those still in ignorance of such an undertaking, is situated between the first and fifth tees in close proximity to the seemingly age-old tennis court, finds space utilized to the utmost.

* * *

In all there is about 5,900 feet of space including the basement and the main floor.

The basement will be turned over to locker rooms, showers, maintenance facilities and the like, while the main floor embodies a well-planned layout for a club of Colwood's present dimensions.

* * *

First Derek showed us the patio where the sun-worshippers can sip their mint juleps as the evening rays slant through the gnarled oaks and stately pines which border the west side of the $62,000 structure.

Inside there's a lounge for the ladies, a gents' rotunda, a mixed lounge and most ideally located of the lot—the 19th hole.

* * *

"We've also got a lunch room," our guide informed us. "Nothing elaborate, mind, but we can cater to about 30 at one sitting." The rest of the paraphernalia is there, too—electric kitchen, bar, powder room, etc.

"This should be quite adequate for our needs," Derek added, "and I think a number of people—even some of our own members—are going to be agreeably surprised at the finished product."

* * *

Derek then went on to describe in detail the stone masonry that would adorn the front of the building, the cedar shakes for the lower rear and side portions, and the paneled woodwork between the huge windows. "One feature I really like," he said as he showed us the architects' sketch of clubhouse, "are the windows."

* * *

Any doubts that the building would be ready for occupancy by the stipulated date in mid-August were quickly dispelled by the genial ex-ministry of supply official when he said "Right now we're about a week ahead of schedule and by late July we hope to start moving some of the furnishings in."

Though nothing official has come to our attention, the rumor is strong enough that it can be felt even at Gorge Vale that a goodly number of the city's leading male shotsmiths are seriously considering going into conciliation before the city tournament takes place at the Gorge this year.

Undaunted by rain at Vic High meet were Caroline Cowpersmith, Barbara Oliphant, Glenna Bruce and Lorraine Brown.

Fastest Mile, 880 At Vic High Meet

Burgess Tops Patrick Mark In Downpour

It wasn't only the rain which came tumbling down at yesterday's 75th anniversary Victoria High School track meet.

Driving through the sharp showers which had a happy crowd of student spectators huddled under umbrellas in the big memorial stadium, stocky, crew-cut Don Burgess showed the most promising distance form of any Vic High product in recent years.

Burgess brought down two long-standing records, knocking 14.2 seconds off Muzz Patrick's time in the mile, and clipping a tenth of a second off Bill Dale's old 880 mark.

Although Burgess was nudged out for senior championship honors by versatile Ted Whan, he did lead his House One to top place, with 166 points, in the house competition. House Four was second with 139½, House Two had 114, and House Three 80½.

SENIOR GIRLS

Senior girls trophy went to Marge Durnin, whose time of 7.9 seconds in the 60-yard dash set the third new record of the meet.

Intermediate champs were Bob Abbott and Chris Boyd. Beverly Koski and Virginia Barrie tied for junior girl honors, and George Robinson won the junior boys' cup.

Meet officials were pleased with results and performances on the new cinder track, and felt that even faster times might have been posted under better weather conditions.

Results follow:

SENIOR BOYS

100-yard dash—1, Ted Whan (IV); 2, Ivan Glenday (II); 3, Bruce Arnold (I).
440 yards—1, Whan (IV); 2, Bob Duggan (I); 3, Doug Perlette (III).

LONGEST PUCK SEASON IN 20 YEARS ENDS TONIGHT

TORONTO (CP)—No one in Toronto or district will have the least regret when the big sign at Maple Leaf Gardens proclaiming "hockey tonight" winks out for the last time this season.

Valleyfield Braves meet St. Michael's Monarchs tonight for the Alexander Cup, a major-league ice affair melted into minor-league proportions by May weather.

It's the last official game of the season—and it's just as well. If there were any more, probably nobody would pay to see them.

Win, lose or draw, a winner will be declared. Canadian Amateur Hockey Association officials, after checking their seed catalogues and farmers' almanacs, decided the series should end pronto. Pointing up their decision was the fact that the season just ending—it opened Sept. 22—has been the longest in 20 years.

To speed Canada's national sport to the sign marked "exit," the C.A.H.A. dwarfed an original seven-game series into six by making the last two games count four points each.

Coleman's Column

By JIM COLEMAN

The Canadian cauliflower market is experiencing a boom which is occasioning great joy among such honest brokers as Edmund V. Quinn and Jack "The Deacon" Allen. A new Canadian indoor record for gate receipts is expected to be established when Rocky Graziano fights Johnny Greco at Montreal's Forum on May 21 and a new Toronto "gate" record is in prospect when L'il Arthur King is lured back across the border to defend his British Empire lightweight championship against Armand Savoie.

Coleman

Mr. Slitkin, the less verbose member of the old Montreal firm of Slitkin and Slotkin, is authority for the prediction that Graziano and Greco will gross $60,000, which is considered to be a nice, coarse sum. "Perish the thought that I should stoop to crass mercenary details when discussing the manly art of self-defence," said Mr. Slitkin, polishing his nude pate with a table napkin, "but 60 G's is 60 G's, unless you convert it into rubles."

"Easy on those napkins," growled Mr. Slitkin's partner, Mr. Slotkin, "they cost 22 bucks per gross and they aren't to be used for raising spinach on billiard balls."

Will King Abide By The Writ?

While the financial success of the Graziano-Greco bout is a foregone conclusion, the clash between King and Savoie is, as they say in the more erudite fight circles, "bounding in impossibilities."

Savoie established himself as the uncrowned lightweight boxing king of several new territories last Monday night when he destroyed Pierre Montane in three minutes flat. Montane is the champion of France and the victory gives Savoie unofficial dominion over Montreal, Toronto, France, Martinque and the islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon.

However, Montane ate a steak on Monday morning and weighed one pound more than the lightweight limit, thus depriving Savoie of recognition by the statesman at Quai D'Orsay.

And, even Canada's box-fight statesmen have failed to give Savoie any official recognition, despite the fact that he has ruined some of the brightest young lightweights in the profession.

King, for his part, has been keeping his British Empire lightweight title hidden in a safety-deposit box in a Philadelphia bank. Savoie's lawyers are seeking a writ of habeas corpus which would compel King to produce the body when he ventures onto Canadian soil.

Modesty Is A Charming Virtue

One of the difficulties that promoters experience when attempting to sign King for a bout is the almost complete impossibility of locating his will-o'-the-wisp manager, Blinky Palermo. It is apparent that Mr. Palermo has more hideouts than a Saskatchewan gopher.

Deacon Allen ran up a long-distance telephone bill of $123 in his pursuit of Palermo's verbal okay for a King-Savoie bout.

At that, Allan was more successful than Estes Kefauver and the members of the U.S. Senate Crime Committee who were interested in meeting Palermo at Philadelphia recently. They wished to question Mr. Palermo concerning his gambling activities.

Deacon Allen long has contended that Savoie should wear a boxing glove atop his noggin. This contention is based on the theory that Savoie has a tendency to butt his opponents around the eyes in moments of stress.

The Deacon has produced photographic evidence from a Montreal paper to support his contention. The photo shows Montane, after his Savoie bout, sporting a large cut on the forehead over his right eye.

"A punch couldn't cut him up there," quoth The Deacon. "Jack Dempsey, who could punch harder than any other man, never left a dent like that."

Butts or no butts, Savoie is a tremendously powerful puncher who can hit with any lightweight in the business. If King elects to punch with him, L'il Arthur might be well-advised to equip himself with some springs in the seat of his pants.

Keglers Get Hot At A.B.C. Tournament

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP)—The best scoring tournament in the 48-year history of the American Bowling Congress reached its climax Friday with one perfect 300-game and another score of 299.

Vince Lucci, 39-year-old Trenton, N.J., kegler, entered bowling's elite when he slapped the pins for the 300 score in his second game of double competition. It was his first 300-game in sanctioned play, although he has rolled three other games of that high score. He carries a composite average of 202 in three leagues.

Lucci, who has been bowling for 17 years, had other games of 197 and 237 for a 734 total, the second high series of the meet. That figure was surpassed only by the 775 score of Lee Jouglard of Detroit earlier in the week. It was the 19th 700-count of the tournament and helped Lucci to an all-events total of 1,897, the best rolled by any member of Friday's three squads.

It was the first 300 in A.B.C. competition since Leo Rollick of Huntington Park, Calif., performed the feat in the 1946 meet at Buffalo, N.Y., and it was the 11th in A.B.C. play.

Shortly before Lucci rolled his 300 game, Howard Rommell of Sturgis, Mich., had rolled a 299 total in the second game of his doubles competition. The 44-year-old Sturgis bowler left the ten-pin standing in a pocket hit on his 12th ball. His best previous single game was a 297.

Rommell's 299 was the 14th in A.B.C. tournament play.

WHAT PRICE VICTORY?

NEW YORK (UP)—Middleweight Walter Cartier will be sidelined for several weeks because of wounds suffered while winning an upset, split 10-round decision over young Eugene (Silent) Hairston in last night's thriller before 4,693 at Madison Square Garden.

Floored twice in the first two rounds, Cartier of New York came on to knock his dusky townsman to the canvas is the last round. But he suffered badly mashed and gashed left ear, a cut at the corner of his right eye, and slight cuts in his nose.

WHY THEY DIE BROKE

YONKERS, N.Y. (NEA).—In 1950 alone, Yonkers Raceway patrons failed to cash $29,298 worth of winning tickets. New York's pari-mutuel records show $1,851,756 in uncashed tickets over 11 years.

Victoria's Roger Monteith not only describes Lower Campbell Lake fly as "darn good," but claims the trout, he, Mrs. Monteith and Johnny Wenger reeled in this week as "the best fish I've seen come out of that lake both in size and condition." "Some," he said, "went to nearly two pounds."

Trolling dry and wet flies (yellow-bodied bucktail and the Peter Ross) on the wind-tossed waters, the trio had little trouble getting their limits, 12 a day per licensed fisherman. Johnny started out with a spinner but switched to fly and did a lot better. Monteith claims the fly outscored the trollers with gang trolls 4 to 1.

Thorsen

Dr. Harold Carson must have seen the Times' picture the other day showing the Monteiths-Wenger handsome catches laid out on the steps of Forbes Landing Hotel. In Wilson & Lenfesty's store the next day, restocking his kit, he was almost trembling with eagerness to get to the lake and tussle with the beauties. He also got a licence for Mrs. Carson and her brother, Fred Anunsen, of Salem, Ore.

Dr. Bobby Hunter, another veteran fisherman, will also be invading the popular fishing lake with an eastern friend this week-end.

Stan Williams types Shawnigan Lake as a good example of the way fishing is coming back through annual stocking of fingerlings by the game department. There was a time when the lake was almost totally fished out, but the plantings have brought the lake back to the point where sporting goods men can advertise "good fishing" there once again.

Prefer 'Quality' Fishing

"The lake is very good now; the boys and girls trolling orange flatfish besting the fly fishermen," said "Blondy." An indication of the healthy population of fish can be seen on a good fly-hatching day.

The story of the team of A. Burton and Jack Seedhouse, inveterate small mouth black bass a[illegible], is one of putting quality ahead of quantity.

They are always out to get "a bigger one" and consequently in their quests in local bass lakes release scores of the fish they hook. This year they've tested Elk Lake and done quite well. Last Sunday at Prospect Lake the team boated another good catch—biggest 5½ pounds. On Wednesday they landed seven — biggest 5½ pounds. They will be testing Langford and Florence Lakes next and will then go over to St. Mary's Lake on Salt Spring Island. Their record thus far is an eight-pounder. At Prospect, Burton and Seedhouse have found surface plugs and flatfish most productive.

Headwaters of the Cowichan River is reported offering a fairly good brand of sport. We are told that those who are willing to do some wading will find some fine fly fishing between Skutz Falls and Siwash Rips in Cowichan. If the fish are rising anglers should switch to the dry fly.

May Hike Fish-Game Fees

Trout fishing throughout the island is gradually improving on the lower Island — Wolf, Kemp and Dougan Lakes among those branded good. From Courtenay to Campbell River lakes and rivers are reported producing from fair to good sport.

Although not as many fish are surfacing in Saanich Inlet, this week's catches show there is still a pretty good supply of blues and jacks and some springs to warrant a week-end try.

Freshwater fishermen can expect a $2 fee instead of a lone buck for their licence next year. It is also likely the hunting licence will be hiked a dollar to $4 this fall. That was recommended at the recent sportsmen's parley in Vancouver. Sportsmen won't mind the hike if it means better sport will come on the game trails and in lake and stream. Game Department is happy over the government decision to give them 75 per cent of the annual revenue through wildlife resources to carry out the ambitious aims of the department.

Successful Fishermen

Local scattergunners have been invited to a Franklin River Gun Club trap shoot June 10. "It's a lot of fun, and anyone who wants to go along can contact me," said Monteith.

Top-weight springs taken in Saanich Inlet during the week-end were an 18¾-pounder by George Janak and a 14-pounder by Tommy Banister.

Other catches reported:

Hall's Boathouse, Goldstream—Gebrge Cleaver, 10 blues last Saturday, and with C. E. Cerrigan on Sunday, 11 blues; Charlie Panting, 9 blues; R. W. Ray, 8 blues; Frank Thew and A. Anderson, 6 blues, 5 jacks, Anderson also taking a 10¼-pound, two smaller springs and two blues on another day.

Pat McLean and Fred Curl, 7 jacks, 3 blues; Sid Upton, 5 blues, 1 jack; Fred Newham and daughter, Ann, 11 blues; R. Laird and partner, 5 jacks, 4 blues; Robert Lewis and Tommy Forbes, 7 blues; W. T. Bennan and Thew, 3 jacks, 7 blues (Thursday); and A. Coulther and Lionel Dickson, 7 blues (Friday morning).

Anchorage Boathouse, Brentwood—Tom Harper, 6 blues; Bud Chaffie, 7 blues; Len Rowe and party, 7 blues; Bob Mills, 8-pound spring; Harry Mercer, 6-pound spring, 2 blues; Buster England, 1 spring, 9 blues; and Charlie Rippengale, W. Spragnall and G. Wale, 14 blues. "All caught on 2 to 4 ounces of weight on all types of lures," says Harry Peard.

LEARN GOLF FROM THE STARS

Hogan Interested In Those Willing To Work

First of a series written for NEA Service.

By BEN HOGAN
U.S. Open Champion

I divide golfers who take lessons generally into three classes, as follows:

(1) The student willing to work, take the proper instructions and carry out the advice given him by the professional.

(2) The player who is fairly good, but won't do the necessary work to improve.

(3) The trick player. This is the week-end player. He comes out to the club, wants a few tricks every week-end, Friday afternoons or Saturday mornings, so that it will get him by the week-end he is going to play.

The last-named is very prevalent.

He is not too interested, will always tell you he plays only for the companionship and exercise.

I don't believe that is true. Anyone who plays is always concerned with his score.

The truth is that he just doesn't want to put in the effort to improve.

It is the job of the professional to try and convert disinterested players into the class that is willing to work to improve. That is just about the toughest job one could imagine.

As I said at my clinic at the P.G.A.'s annual meeting in Chicago, my hypothetical pupil is the kind of fellow who wants to learn.

I don't like, or want, any part of those other two fellows.

Starting to teach a newcomer, or an old-timer for that matter, it should be impressed upon him that the observer can better correct the swing of a player than the player himself.

He can see the entire swing, note errors.

The player does not know just exactly what he looks like when he hits the ball.

The player only goes through what I call feelings. I more or less feel my swing as I hit the ball.

I never try to go through any mechanical motions.

It would be much too difficult.

I would have very little power if I did.

Ferrier Tops Greenbriar At 36-Hole Mark

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W.Va. (UP)—Big Jim Ferrier of San Francisco moaned about "the ones that got away" as he kept a few scant steps ahead of the field at the start of the third round in the Greenbrier invitation golf tournament today.

Ferrier paired a first-round six-under-par 64 and a second-round 67 for the 131 total which gave him the lead at the half-way mark of the 72-hole competition. Breathing right down his neck were home pro Sammy Snead, with a 134, and never-quit Ben Hogan of Mershey, Pa., with a 137.

Snead shot a 67 yesterday, his second in a row. Hogan shot a 69 after an opening-round 68.

Bob Hamilton of Evansville, Ind., who trailed Ferrier by only one stroke in the first round, soared to 73 yesterday and was tied at 138 with Jim Turnesa of Briacliff, N.Y., and Al Brosch of Garden City, N.Y., both of whom shot 68's yesterday.

Parnell Scores For W.S.C. Track Team

SEATTLE (CP)—Bill Parnell of Vancouver and two teammates ran a dead heat mile as Washington State College defeated Washington University 72½ to 58½ in a dual track meet Friday.

Parnell, George Stimac and Lee Cave chalked up nine points for W.S.C. by running the mile in 4.21.1. Parnell also won the 880 in 1.54.6.

ROBINSON WOULD LEAVE BASEBALL

Aim In Life 'To Help People'

BOSTON (UP) — Second baseman Jackie Robinson, a determined but disturbed star of the Brooklyn Dodgers, said he'd quit baseball if unwarranted disputes threatened to undo the good he's been trying to do.

The National League batting champion of 1949 and runner-up last year said in quietly sincere fashion he had promised his wife, his bosses and himself at the start of the season that he'd try to avoid arguments.

"I have in every way I know how," said the 33-year-old Robinson, first of his race to crack the big leagues. "But somehow these things keep coming up.

Among "these things" were statements criticizing umpires, and "dustings" by pitchers that provoked an attempt to pile into Giant hurler Sal Maglie and a dispute with Giant manager Leo Durocher. Ultimately Robinson was reprimanded by National League President Ford Frick.

Robinson admitted he had been stung by these incidents because he contended they were not of his own making. A soft-spoken college graduate with a deep-seated social conscience, Robinson said his aim in life is to help people—the less-fortunate and especially the under-privileged children.

"If I felt for a minute my opportunity to do this was in jeopardy, I'd leave baseball forever," he said. "I love baseball but I couldn't let it undo all the things I believe in."

Blacks Take Interhigh Baseball Lead

Victoria High School Blacks moved into top place in the Senior Baseball League by outscoring Esquimalt High School 8 to 3 at Macdonald Park Thursday.

Both teams made numerous errors as the Blacks scored five runs in the first, one in the second and then two in the third when Doug Perlette hit a two-run homer.

Esquimalt tallied twice in the first and then once in the second.

Archie Sillars of the Blacks came up with the fielding gem of the game when he speared a line drive behind second base and whipped the ball to first for the final out of the game.

Mount Douglas took over second place in the league by defeating Mount View 5 to 1 and the Vic High School Golds overwhelmed Oak Bay by a 10 to 3 score.

At Beacon Hill, Mount Doug's Don Easton twirled a neat three-hitter to give the home team victory. Mount Douglas tallied once in the first inning and then loaded the bases in the fifth with two away.

Mount View then walked in the winning run before Bud Webb banged out a three-run triple to put the game on ice.

Richards Keeping Sox In Thick Of A.L. Race

"I don't pick anybody to beat the White Sox." That's how Paul Richards, manager of the Chicago White Sox, sized up the American League race on opening day.

So far he's right.

Chicago's freshman manager is proving he can win in the majors as well as in the minors. A manager of the John McGraw school, the driving leader has his White Sox in the van of the American League pennant race.

Hailed as a developer of pitchers, especially in the case of Detroit's Hal Newhouser, Richards also is gaining recognition as a smart hombre when it comes to trading. He was firmly behind last Winter's trade that sent starting pitchers Ray Scarborough and Bill Wight to Boston Red Sox for outfielder Al Zarilla and pitchers Joe Dobson and Dick Littlefield.

So far, Richards has come out on top in that deal.

Zarilla plugged a gap in right field and today is tied for the league lead with 18 runs batted in.

Dobson failed to impress until last night when he just missed turning in the second no-hit no-run game of the season. Scarborough has only one victory to show and Wight has failed to crash the winner's circle.

Dobson, 34-year-old righthander, pitched the Sox into a third-place tie with Cleveland by beating the Indians 12-1 before 17,138 fans at Commiskey Park.

PINCH-HIT BLOW

Dobson had a no-hitter until the eighth inning when pinch-hitter Bob Avila broke the spell with a two-out double.

Dobson's feat was the third one-hitter of the season. Con Marrero of Washington performed the trick against Philadelphia last month and Sal Maglie of the New York Giants did it against Pittsburgh last week. Cliff Chambers of Pittsburgh pitched a no-hit no-run victory over Boston last Sunday.

TROUT VICTOR

Dizzy Trout turned in his first victory of the season as Detroit Tigers humbled the Browns 7-1 under the lights of St. Louis.

Chicago Cubs treated Chambers like a semi-pro pitcher as they pounded the Pirates 10-4 in the only game played in the National League.

Sons' Stock Soars With Lacrosse Fans

VANCOUVER (CP)—Nanaimo Native Sons made their mainland Intercity Lacrosse League debut a big one last night before 1,600 customers although they bowed 12 to 11 to North Shore Indians. The Sons completely captivated the fans with their robust, colorful play.

Nanaimo's spirited showing dispelled any suggestion that they're the league easy marks. They are anything but.

Goalis Fred Fulla could very well prove the league's premier net custodian, and the defensive duo of 195-pound Bill Seward and 200-pound Larry Garland rates with the best in the league.

Up front, Don White looked real sharp, along with Ken Simpson, Reg Dorman and Spud Morelli.

Joseph may have lost his goal-tending job to sensational rookie Vic Grover. The former Eagle-Time junior replaced Joseph in the second half, and played a major part in Indians' comeback, stopping 13 of 16 shots.

Indians jumped to a 3-to-2 quarter lead, but Nanaimo rained 16 shots at Joseph in the second, enough to earn an 8-to-6 margin.

But Indians, with their key men finally playing near standard, pulled even 9-to-9 at three-quarter time.

Reg Dorman gave Nanaimo a 10-to-19 lead on an odd-man play at 7:48 of the finale, before Indians were gifted with a double Native Sons penalty, to Seward and Earle Bennie.

Shadow Hull squared it 10-to-10 at 11:59, and Mario Crema, from Jack Boyd gave Indians the lead 37 seconds later.

"Now I've put REGULAR SAVINGS in my budget

We've always been methodical about spending. We've stuck to a detailed budget. But, you know how it is these days. There are so many things you feel you want to spend your money on.

However, my wife and I thought we'd never get round to a methodical savings plan.

When the Mutual Life representative called, we found he understood our money problems better than anybody we've ever talked to.

He showed us that investing in a life insurance policy was a sure way to keep our savings on a regular basis. We took his advice and found it worked out."

Now regular Saving is in our budget to stay. The protection it gives is something I'm mighty thankful for, both for the children and myself."

Surprise, Gents, Bette Davis Still Has Box Office Appeal

By ERSKINE JOHNSON

HOLLYWOOD (NEA)—Exclusively Yours: Now that Bette Davis is a box-office smash in "Payment on Demand," it can be told. Several top profile kings, whose names would floor you, turned down the chance to play opposite Bette on the grounds that she was washed up as a star. Barry Sullivan, who would not listen to the dirge, has jumped skyward with exhibitors for his acting in the film.

* * *

Spring of 1952 is the date set by Z. Wayne Griffin for the start of Clark Gable's "The Big Moose"—a yarn about logging. Clark, meanwhile, is just waiting for the date on which Sylvia will file suit for divorce. Her New York "holiday" will have her checking the calendar.

* * *

Tip-off on Ginger Rogers' decision to tackle a Broadway play is her huddles with Producer Chandler Cowles.

* * *

Joan Crawford's chassis will be padded for the first time in her career if she decides to do "Size Twelve" for Wald-Krasna. It's the story of a model who puts on weight and can no longer squeeze into sample dresses.

* * *

Newlyweds Arlene Dahl and Lex Barker have a screen play in their honeymoon baggage that they're aching to do as co-stars. It's one of the many reasons why Arlene asked for her release from MGM.

HOLLYWOOD REVIEW

Barrymore's Memoirs Show He's Sentimental, Not Gruff

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—That master of the growl and rumble, Lionel Barrymore, has completed his memoirs. They reveal him to be as sentimental as any of us.

The reminiscences, under the title "We Barrymores," were told to Cameron Shipp, the sage of Glendale, who also listened to Billie Burke's remembrances. The book is full of gruff, self-effacing anecdotes, as well as warm recollections of Lionel's fellow workers. This is how he discusses some of them:

John Barrymore—"My brother's real and earnest and life-long ambition was to be a painter. He even . . . persuaded Maurice (his father) to put money for lessons in the hands of the art students' league; but . . . trapping Jack Barrymore in a classroom was like tethering a he-fawn in a cell. He broke loose in one day and escaped."

Greta Garbo—her unpretentiousness was so extreme that it amounted almost to a malady. She appeared and disappeared as silently as a wraith. . . .

"She has real simplicity, the true simplicity of the genius—only she is so different that her psychology is comparable to the terror of a gun-shy bird dog."

Margaret O'Brien—"I soon realized that Margaret could perform like no youngster I or anybody else had ever seen. When she takes over, you might as well imagine yourself a design on the wallpaper."

Ethel Barrymore — "In 1949 Ethel celebrated 53 years on theatre and sound stage and her 70th birthday . . . on the wireless to what seemed like cosmic applause — and to be like simple justice. My sister, after all, is the champion. She has licked the only unlickable person — time himself."

MUSICAL FESTIVAL CLOSES

Patricia Shakespeare Captures Scholarship, Victoria Medallion

By AUDREY ST. D. JOHNSON

Victoria Musical Festival's major awards were made Friday night, before a capacity audience in the First United Church. The Marian MacGovern scholarship, presented by the Victoria Chapter, Royal Conservatory of Music of Toronto Alumni, as well as the Victoria City medallion, were both carried off by Patricia Joy Shakespeare.

Miss Shakespeare had close competition from Sheila Bates and Betty L. Le Motte. In the final contest, the brilliant young pianist played "Idyl" (Medtner) and "Sontaine" (Bartok). A Musical Festival Association bursary was awarded Miss Bates for her fine performances of Bach and Beethoven.

Betty Le Motte's artistry, combined with a lovely contralto voice, won her the coveted B.C. Electric Rose Bowl, competed for by winners in adult vocal solo classes.

Festival association bursaries were awarded to Diana Bruntlett, Mary MacLean, Eleanor Eilers, Lorraine Brand, Patricia Shakespeare and Alexander Murray.

The Henry Birks & Sons (B.C.) Ltd. prize, for the most artistic performance in the festival, was awarded to Malcolm Hamilton for his splendid work as accompanist throughout the festival week.

Adjudicators Glyndwr Jones and Theodore Normann spoke highly of the standard of the Victoria Festival, lauded the work being done in the schools, thanked Victoria for its hospitality, and J. F. K. English, president of the Festival Association, and members of the committee for their efficient organization.

In what Mr. Jones described as one of the most important classes in the festival, church choirs, grade A, First United Church retained the W. A. Jameson Coffee Co. Challenge Shield, winning over St. Andrew's Presbyterian and Christ Church Cathedral choirs with a marking of 178.

Final results follow: Piano classes, seven years and under, Vicky Vigar and Cashman Roger Hampton (tied), 88; quick study, junior, Marlene Bentley, 83; quick study, intermediate, Lorraine Brand, 85; 15 years and under, Lorraine Brand, 89; 11 years and under, Thelma Fraser, 84; 17 years and under, Wilma Johnson, 80.

Junior vocal classes, boys 11 years and under, Bruce Main and James Costain (tied), 78; girls 11 years and under, Betsy Nash, 81; junior contralto solo, Marlene Vance, 79; junior vocal duet, Catherine Dixon and Margaret Dobrocky, 80; junior vocal trio, Marjorie Durnin, Sonia Slusarenko and Carolyn Sinkinson, 83.

Vocal classes, operatic solo (female voices, Aurore Laprise, 82; soprano solo, grade B, Geraldine May Nash, 85; female voice choirs, grade C, Victoria High School Glee Club, 176.

The Y.M.C.A. Music Hour Sunday will feature a four-piece ensemble appearing through the courtesy of the Musicians' Union, and two guest vocalists, Arthur Stringer and Alice Waddell. The program will commence at 9 p.m. in the mural room.

Drama Festival Monday

LONDON, Ont. (INS)—There should be a special roll of drums to herald the opening Monday of the fifth Dominion Drama Festival since the war. While the stakes are the same, most groups will be making their first appearance in national competition.

The Bessborough Trophy probably will be uppermost in the minds of most groups when they go on the stage of London Little Theatre. However, aside from getting an approving nod from adjudicator Jose Ruben, most of them will also be looking forward to picking up tips.

Eight plays will vie for honors.

'HOW I TOOK THE STONE'

Party Unmolested As Stone Returns To Native Scotland

By IAN HAMILTON
CHAPTER 18

Yesterday's chapter described the return north of the author and his companions, and how Nelson was questioned by a policeman in York while he was carrying a car seat through the city. Today, in the final chapter, Ian Hamilton, the author, describes their last hours sitting on the Stone. . . . How it was brought back over the border and his relief at having completed the job he set out to do 10 days before.

As we pulled into Thirsk, a man in bus driver's uniform stepped forward and thumbed us. Alan, who was driving, pulled in and stopped. The man jumped gratefully in.

He was going to Northallerton and as we drove he talked cheerfully to us. The talk at length inevitably veered to the Coronation Stone, as the English call it.

"You know, of course," Alan told him, "that the Dean's a Scotsman, and the night watchman's a Scotsman. It was obviously an inside job."

At Northallerton the busman went his way, pondering on the ubiquity of the Scot, but never dreaming that he had had the honor to drive with the Stone of Destiny.

DANGEROUS TERRITORY

We crossed the Great North Road south of Darlington, and headed north. We were now well into dangerous territory, and we kept a constant look-out for police, being very careful at all times to observe the highway code.

The further north I got, the more nervous I felt, for it would be ironical to be caught now only 80 miles from the border.

Near West Auckland we drove into a filling station, and I got out to get petrol. The attendant was busily engaged reading the Sunday papers.

I felt very nervous indeed, for £1,000 might be enough to turn an honest man into a police informer.

"Where have you come from?" the attendant asked, joking and making conversation.

"Southampton."

"Where are you going to?"

"North."

He glanced into the car at the two tired occupants and the empty beer bottles.

"You haven't got the Coronation Stone in there, have you?" he laughed.

'IT'S IN THE BACK'

He laughed. "Aye," I said. "It's in the back of the car there."

He laughed, and I got back into the car and drove away, wondering why life could not be quiet for a change.

We now started to climb up over the moors which are the backbone of England, and the scenery changed to rolling fells and wide, fertile dales.

The country was pure with snow, and had it not been for our anxiety we would have enjoyed the sight of it.

We drove on through Walsingham, Stanhope and Alston, all sleeping quietly in the Sunday forenoon, then on to Brampton. We were getting more and more cautious, the roads were bad and we were driving the most precious cargo that had ever approached the border.

A long time back I had insisted on taking the wheel, for I was selfish enough to claim the honor of driving it over the border.

As we approached the border we were as tense as tigers. We had seen no police patrols on the roads but there was a bridge at Longtown which would make an excellent check-point.

As we swept through Longtown, I wondered if we would make it. We were only three miles from the border and although there were police north of the border we knew that they were more sympathetic.

ANY HOUSE A HAVEN

Indeed we felt that if we were hard pressed we had only to drive up to any house in Scotland and they would hide the Stone for us.

We rounded the last corner and the bridge came in sight. There was no one on it. I put on speed, and we shot across and went straight on up the Langholm Road.

Two miles later we crossed the border.

As we crossed we gave a little cheer, but we did not stop immediately, for we wanted to feel we were really back in Scotland.

The difference was amazing: from being tense and excited, I passed to being relaxed and silent, and filled with a great contentment.

No matter what happened now, we had returned the Stone, from which Scotland's destiny is inseparable.

Shortly we stopped the car to perform a ceremony which we had all had in our minds.

When we left Glasgow, we had taken with us a gill of whisky which we had carefully preserved.

Now, a mile inside Scotland, we stopped and produced the whisky. We pulled back the coat from the Fail, and each poured out a little of the wine of the country on to it, signifying its return to the Celtic people.

DRINK TOASTS

Then we each proposed and drank a toast. Neil, to the four revivers of Christmas Day, Alan to the Stone, myself to the New Scotland whose rebirth was symbolized by the return of the Stone.

We drove on in a daze through the friendly fields of Dumfrieshire and Lanarkshire, all excitement over, all worry forgotten. But as we neared Glasgow a new worry intruded itself.

What were we going to do with the Stone now that we had it in Scotland? We had left on Friday night in such a hurry that we had made no arrangements for a hiding place, and as we got nearer and nearer to Glasgow the problem became more and more urgent.

We argued about it for many miles. Alan wanted to take it to his home, and I wanted to take it to mine in Perthshire, but we rejected those places as being too dangerous if we should be arrested.

We did not want to contact any known Nationalists for they might be under observation, and we were frightened of Mr. King and Mr. Mason for the same reason.

I had visions of driving up to some of my father's friends and leaving it on their doorstep, and I am sure that any of them would have been overjoyed to take it. But I hesitated to bring new untried people into the organization.

On the outskirts of Glasgow we dropped Neil, for he had to attend a Hogmany party that night at which he was guest of honor and he wished to go home to change.

Alan and I drove on wrestling with our dilemma alone. We ran into Glasgow and drove along Gallowgate just after darkness.

We drove along Argyle Street and up Buchanan Street and along to the King's Theatre.

WHAT TO DO

Then we pulled up and wondered what we would do. It was a strange sensation.

Alan had been driving and I was sitting on the Stone looking out at the people passing along the familiar pavements, quite unaware of the drama, we were arguing out in the car.

At length the only decision we could come to was to phone Mr. Mason.

He was just sitting down to his dinner as I phoned, but he left his soup to grow cold, and came immediately. We told him we would be outside the King's Theatre.

I went back to Alan. We were both starving, and I remembered a little fish and chip shop in Great Western Road which was open on a Sunday.

IDENTITY CLOAKED

We drove round to it and I got two fish suppers. We were just finishing them as Mr. Mason drew up.

We explained our dilemma, and he left us immediately to make a phone call, and then he parked his car and climbed in beside us.

We drove for half an hour in a westerly direction. But at this point in my story I must cloak the identity of the man whom we met, for his official position at present, forbids my mentioning him.

We drove straight into his garage, where he was waiting for us. He had not been told why we were coming to see him, but I think he had guessed.

When I stepped out and pulled away the poor shabby coat which covered the Stone of Destiny he gave a start.

We were introduced to him under false names and handed over the Stone to him.

"Guard it with your life," I told him. "They may arrest us and hold us at the court's discretion until it is produced, but no matter what happens don't give it up."

He smiled grimly. I think he would have delighted in torture for the chance not to betray the Stone.

Some time later I was formally introduced to him under my own name. He did not give me a flicker of recognition.

Alan drove me home and I climbed the stairs wearily to my room. Nelson had been before us, and the front seat of the car was under my bed. We took it down and fitted it, and Alan drove home to face his father.

In a short time Nelson came in. He was jubilant at our success. It was almost 10 o'clock and he was going on to a New Year's party.

I, too, had been invited to that party, but I could not face it, so I made my excuses to Nelson and saw him depart.

REMINISCENCES

I lay on my bed and smoked a cigaret. I did not want to sleep, for in two hours the New Year would come in.

I thought of how, only 10 days before, I had left this room to go to London to bring back the Stone. We had done that.

True, our success was not quite complete, for there was Kay's piece of the Stone lying in Birmingham, but I knew there was no difficulty in that.

Indeed, a week later I went down and drove it up in the Anglia without any danger or any risk.

But now that I was face to face with success, I was far from happy.

Scotland was on the march again—of that I was certain.

For 10 glorious days I had carried responsibility in the clearness of action, but now I had handed the Stone into another's keeping.

Freed from responsibility, I felt as though I had expanded into a vacuum. I fell asleep.

Towards midnight, I wakened up.

On a neighbor's radio Big Ben was beating in the New Year. I prayed to God that it might be a successful year for Scotland.

NO DOG, FOX OR WOLF, HE WAS COYOTE

DETROIT (AP) — Four members of a police security patrol saw an animal hopping hedges in an outlying area Friday.

Said A:

"It looks like a dog."

Opined B:

"You're wrong, that's a wolf."

And C:

"Take my word for it, he's a fox."

D suggested they stop arguing and catch the animal.

Humane society authorities identified it as a coyote.

DAMPISH TOUR

Co-operation Keynote Of Parks Group

"Let the rain pitter, patter . . . it really doesn't matter . . .'

That seemed to be the sentiment when the Victoria-Saanich Beaches and Parks Committee met Friday for their annual tour and meeting, at which they approved 1951 maintenance expenditures of $2,905.

Amalgamation may be anathema to the municipalities but when Saanich and Victoria meet on parks co-operation is the keynote and the committee is proud of it.

Chairman is Reeve Joseph Casey of Saanich. In the touring party were: Council Mrs. Grace Shaw, Councillor George Austin, Ald. Waldo Skillings, Ald. William Pinfold, Ald. Robert Macmillan, Henry Blakeny, Saanich superintendent of works, City Manager Cecil Wyatt, John Tribe, Saanich municipal clerk, and Morran Waller, committee secretary.

Request from Central Saanich for representation on the committee was referred to City Council.

'World In Need Of Moral Strength'

The Social Credit Association of Canada in British Columbia wound up their annual convention Friday night with a banquet in Lougheed's Hall.

Guest speaker for the evening was Sir Robert Holland. Sir Robert, one-time political secretary to the government of India, spoke on "Moral Principles."

He declared that the U.N. was a failure in stopping war, and that the only way that piece can be gained is spiritually.

The second charge to be vacated at the end of June is that of Belmont United church. The congregation has extended a call to Rev. Melvin Dobson of Wainwright, Alberta, to take over from Rev. C. R. McGillivray who will take a year's vacation from the ministry.

Lay and clergy delegates from every United church in the city will travel to Vancouver for the conference meetings Wednesday and Thursday to hear reports of the work of the church throughout the province.

TO MOVE OR NOT TO MOVE

Least likely he to be detected
Who does the wholly unexpected.
—Whitefoot the Wood Mouse.

Whitefoot the Wood Mouse and Mrs. Whitefoot had made a dreadful discovery. To them it seemed the very worst thing that could have happened. All winter they had lived happily and safely in an old stump in the Green Forest. They had no near neighbors. Now in the beautiful spring, the season of joy and happiness, they found they were not only to have near neighbors, but dreadful neighbors. That is, they were dreadful neighbors to them. They were Redtail the Hawk and Mrs. Redtail who, like most other members of the Hawk family, have a special fondness for Mouse dinners.

"We can't stay here, and this is the best home we ever have had," whimpered little Mrs. Whitefoot. "We've got to move."

"Have we?" squeaked Whitefoot a bit impatiently.

"Of course we have. We can't live right under the very tree in which those dreadful Hawks are making their nest, can we?" whimpered Mrs. Whitefoot.

"I wonder," replied Whitefoot thoughtfully.

"What do you wonder?" demanded Mrs. Whitefoot. "I don't see anything to wonder about excepting where we are to go." She began whimpering again.

"I wonder if we shouldn't stay right here," squeaked Whitefoot.

Little Mrs. Whitefoot forgot to whimper. She stared at Whitefoot as if she were not quite sure she had heard him aright, or else she thought he was crazy. "Of course we have to move, and the sooner the better," she snapped.

"I wonder," repeated Whitefoot in the most provoking way. "I wonder if this may not be the safest place we can live in."

Now Mrs. Whitefoot was sure he was crazy. She said so. She said she didn't feel safe a minute there. From where he was circling high about the trees Redtail screamed to Mrs. Redtail to join him.

"Listen to that!" cried Mrs. Whitefoot. "Don't tell me it is safe here. We must move and do it right away."

"Where to?" asked Whitefoot.

Mrs. Whitefoot said nothing. She didn't know where to, so she held her tongue. Redtail screamed again and she shivered.

"Those Hawks don't know we are living here," said Whitefoot.

"They will find out soon enough," squeaked Mrs. Whitefoot fretfully.

"Not if we are careful and go out only after dark. They hunt only in daytime. So there is nothing to fear from them after dark. We like to be out at night better than in daytime anyway. Besides—" Whitefoot paused.

"Besides what?" asked Mrs. Whitefoot when she could keep still no longer.

"They won't be looking for us so near home. They won't dream of hunting for mice under their very home. If you ask me, this is about the safest place we can be. Yes, my dear, it is the safest place for us in all the Green Forest," replied Whitefoot.

Mrs. Whitefoot looked doubtful. She was doubtful. Did Whitefoot know what he was saying? She was sure she would die of fright if they continued to live there. She said so. Whitefoot took no notice of it.

"I can tell you something more," said he.

"What?" squeaked Mrs. Whitefoot.

"If we stay here we won't even have to think about Hooty the Owl at night," replied Whitefoot. "He will stay away from here. It won't enter his head that we will even think of staying here. My dear, sometimes folks are safest when closest to danger, and I think this is one of those times. Let's not be in a hurry to move."

How Good Are You As A Detective?

By DAVID SHULMAN

INSPECTOR ELMER SHARPE was on the phone talking to Sergeant Temple. "Did I hear you say murder?"

"You better come over, Inspector," he was told. "It's a clear case of murder. There are a couple of knife wounds in Bill Brady's back and no weapon has been found so far. The only clue we have is the number 717 traced on the dusty floor by Brady before he died."

"Have you checked that number?" asked the inspector.

"Yes, we are holding Hugo Barry for questioning. He is the man who occupies room 717 in this hotel where we found Brady. By the way, Lillian Brady has just come in. She's the wife, and as soon as she recovers from shock she will be questioned, too."

An hour later the inspector arrived at the hotel. When he entered the dead man's room he could see the inert body on the bed. The index finger of the right hand was smeared with dust and on the floor below the dangling arm was the number 717 still visible.

After a thorough check on the statements made by Hugo Barry of room 717, his innocence was established. He did not know the deceased and he had an airtight alibi.

"There is only one other person guilty if Brady wanted to leave a clue to his murderer." The inspector turned to Lillian Brady as he said this. "Do you want to confess now or later, madam?"

Why did the inspector accuse Lillian Brady rather than the man in room 717? How good a detective are you?

Answer: From the point of view of a person entering the room, the leaning in the dust read '111'. But, from the dead man's position, it must spell 'LIL', about the Lillian Brady, thus marking her guilt.

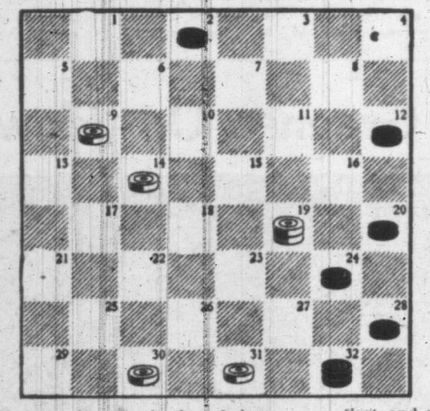
Gone With The Wind

The lecturer on the subject of winning audiences and influencing people was near-sighted. He didn't notice that half of his pupils slipped away in the first 15 minutes, a third of the rest in the next quarter-hour, and a fourth of the remainder in the next 15 minutes, leaving only nine to hear the wind-up of his remarks

From the above you should be able to discover how many pupils there were when the lecture began.

Answer: Three were so.

What Move Now?



White, moving up the board, is to move first and win in four moves. Can you make the right moves to block out Black's chances?

Solution: White 9 to 6; Black 2-16; White 19-30; Black 18-27; White 31-26; Black 13-16; White 26-23 and victory.

Trouble At A Picnic

When the Grange has its annual picnic, every farm truck in the vicinity lined up to carry persons from the Grange hall to the picnic grounds. On the way to the grounds, an accident disabled 10 of the trucks, so it was necessary for each of the remaining trucks to carry one more person.

When the picnic was over and it was time to return to the Grange hall, it was discovered that bad gas or something had disabled 15 more trucks. So on the return trip there were three persons more in each truck than when they started in the morning.

How many persons went to and from the picnic by truck?

Answer: There must have been 500 persons who were present prior to a truck it they were 100 trucks or 75 in a truck after 10 of the trucks were done. When they started for home in 75 trucks 15 persons had to ride in each truck.

MEMORIES NO. 5

AT RUGGED SKAGWAY IN DAYS OF 'SOAPY' SMITH

By
N. deBERTRAND LUGRIN
Author Pioneer Woman of Vancouver Island

(These memoirs are not supposed to follow a chronological historical pattern, they are merely personal, informal commentaries for the passing interest of those who, like myself, born in another part of the Commonwealth have lived in and loved the West, especially Victoria, for the past half century and more.)

WE sailed up Lynn Canal on the last leg of our journey just as the sun was setting. It's splendor swept the quiet waterway and touched the mountains with glory, and we felt almost abashed before such beauty.

Then coming into Skagway we saw the long jetties pushing out into the harbor like the tentacles of enormous devil fish, as we said afterward, for Skagway at that time was a dreadful little town. Crowds met our boat, noisy, pushing, staring crowds. Our brother-in-law was hailed by some men who knew him and he introduced us to one of them who said he would be delighted to take us to our hotel. He was M. J. Heney, the man responsible for the building of the White Pass and Yukon Railway just then in course of construction. He was not tall, but carried himself well, his blue eyes were kindly, he had a small Vandyke beard, and the kindest heart in the world.

View from Porcupine Hill, White Pass and Yukon Route, Skagway, Alaska.

FAMOUS DESPERADO

The streets of Skagway were so crowded that one found it hard to push one's way along. Soapy Smith the much-written of desperado, had been shot only a day or two before. The windows of every shop had photographs of him, alive and dead, the latter were quite horrible and we hurried past them after the first glance. Skagway was very glad to be rid of him for he was responsible for the robbery and death of an unknown number of men and possibly women.

When we reached the hotel and were waiting for our brother-in-law in the sitting room, a rotund landlady in a black silk dress, the tight basque embroidered in passementerie, brought us a fat folio and told us that we would be interested in looking at it while we waited.

The pictures were all of Soapy Smith, alive and dead. We did not look beyond the first page.

But she meant well, that landlady. When we asked her if we could have baths, she informed us that she was having a bath put in as good as any we could find "outside" and it would be ready the following week, when "we could bathe to our heart's content."

After a very good dinner indeed, my sister and I went up to our room and watched the streets from our windows. There were a lot of U.S. negro soldiers about, I belive a company of them had been sent in to police Skagway. But most conspicuous of all among the crowds below was one of our own N.W.M.P. Our hearts warmed to him. We watched him thread his way along, taller than the tallest, and to us, quite beautiful in his scarlet coat and gold-striped trousers.

We had been told to remain in the hotel but we soon got tired of that, and decided as it was still light and would be all night, we would go out and see the city. We slipped away without being noticed, because we did not want to be interfered with by the landlady whom we had heard tell our brother-in-law she would keep an eye on us.

WORST WE EVER SAW

But our walk through the town only increased our first impression that it was the worst place we had ever seen. In fact it was difficult even to make our way along and men stared at us as though we were a foreign species.

Then we heard what was supposed to be music and pushed along toward it. The doors were wide open. We paused to look in, and could not believe what we saw at first. It was a saloon and dance hall.

Sheltered all of our lives, we had no idea of that side of the world, and were shocked beyond words. The crowds were increasing as night advanced but we finally thrust out of them and found ourselves down near the waterfront where the jetties were. One of them was completely empty, though the others were crowded with men and freight from the constantly arriving boats.

We were not quite sure of our way back to the hotel and decided to walk out on the empty jetty and try to get our bearings. We did not want to pass any more dance halls or saloons. It was a beautiful night, the water calm and still reflecting the sky colors. We walked to the end of the pier. When we turned around to go back we saw a man had come along behind us, and was sauntering toward us. He was not a pleasant looking person, but upon meeting us, he removed his hat and smiled, telling us "A fine evening for a walk, girls. Mind if I join you?" Although there were two of us we were thoroughly frightened, largely because of what we had seen a little while before. We knew he could overtake us if we ran, although there was a chance he had no wrong motive at all.

TRUSTED GUARDIAN

Then we looked down to the town side of the jetty and a glad sight met our eyes. It was the N.W.M.P. He just stood there casually looking toward us. The other man following our gaze, straightened up, and lifted his hat again saying, "Well, pleased to of met you," and continued his walk toward the end of the pier.

Our policemen did not wait to speak to us. He turned and walked slowly away. We followed as quickly as we could go without running, and kept him in sight, as no doubt he meant us to do, until we had reached our hotel.

The next day we heard that he had inquired at the hotel about us, shortly after we left, and had kept us within sight. We never saw him again. But we saw many more when we reached the summit of the White Pass, a day or two later. Magnificent looking fellows, over six feet all of them, and for the most part Englishmen. They had been on duty in Skagway until the U.S. soldiers came in. Now they guarded the border between the U.S. and Canada.

It was M. J. Heney who arranged our trip to the summit which was as far as the railway had been completed at that time. It was a thrilling experience that climb over the mountains by the route hundreds had traveled or tried to travel before. Looking from the windows of the car we could see evidences of tragedy, dead horses, their legs sticking up stiffly through the snow, broken sleds, abandoned outfits, a pitiful sight so pitiful that soon we could not look out any more. It was a fearsome ride anyway for my sister and me. We felt that the train might tip over the side at any moment.

The first thing we noticed when we alighted from the train, besides the mounted police, was the large commissary tent, to which we were taken by Mr. Heney and where we had a meal that was a banquet. Afterwards we went for a walk as far as we could go, and looked for the little bright mountain flowers that grow under the snow. We could scarcely believe our eyes when we uncovered them, but it was just as we were exclaiming over them that our attention was diverted by loud cheering, from the railway men, and the mounted police, which was echoed by faint shouts from new arrivals not yet in sight.

ALL CARRYING GOLD

"It's the crowd from Dawson," someone said, "They've come over the ice and out by Lake Bennett, bringing their gold dust with them."

Soon we saw them, a straggling assortment of men, women and children. And every one of them was carrying gold, in boxes, in bags, in bottles, in outsize leather suitcases bulging with bullion that took two men to handle.

They were all shabby. But they were all smiling.

We had a box of fruit, apples, oranges. The children crowded around us, gazing at it longingly. One small bay who had a bottle with some nuggets in it and some dark-looking bits of metal which turned out to be platinum, offered us the whole thing for two oranges for himself and his sister. Of course he would never have been allowed to give it to us nor would we ever have accepted it. But we gladly gave him the oranges and divided the whole basket with the eager children. In a few hours they could get all they wanted probably at Skagway, but ours was the first fresh fruit they had seen since they went into the Yukon and up the creeks.

Next instalment of Memories in next Saturday's Victoria Times Magazine section tells of a thrilling ride through Five Finger Rapids.

BROWN BLISTERS SPELL RUIN OF HOLLY CROP

Get Rid Of Insect Pest By De stroying Each Affected Leaf

IT IS most surprising how many gardeners have sent in holly leaves with large brown blotches. During late spring and summer, it is found that the leaves of holly trees and bushes are disfigured and spoiled by irregular brown patches that, at first appear to be blisters, because they seem to swell up.

On examination, it is found that there is an insect between the two skins of the leaf. This pest eats the green "meat" material, causing the skin to turn brown at the affected areas. If the "blisters" are opened, a small grub is found. Later in the season, the pest turns into a chrysalis.

Solly

This damage to the leaf generally causes it to fall off the tree prematurely.

At the time when the trouble is first noticed, the pest has already entered the leaf. Being protected by the leaf skin, there is no spray material that can reach it. Should your tree be affected this year, it will be worse next year, unless precautions are taken to prevent it.

TEDIOUS BUT NCESSARY

The only way to get rid of the pest it to pick off each affected leaf. It is necessary to burn or otherwise destroy the leaves and to be sure the pest is killed while doing so. Picking the leaves that show the brown patches may seem like a tedious job, but the effort necessitated is well worthwhile. Should almost every leaf of the tree be affected it is posible to denude the tree of all its leaves by the use of a strong oil spray. The tree will leaf out again immediately if so treated, but since this is a very drastic, although effective method it is advised that a competent spray man should be hired to do the work, which should only be resorted to in extreme cases.

To ensure a healthy crop like this for Christmas give holly attention now.

During the fall and winter months, many of the affected leaves drop off. The chrysalis either stays in the leaf or remains on or in the soil surface during the winter. To eliminate most or all of these over-wintering chrysalis, the aid of the birds may be enlisted. To encourage the birds to clean up as many of the pests as possible, all the dead leaves, under the tree should be raked up and carefully burned. Birds will not go under a holly tree or hedge in search of food while the dead prickly leaves are there. Once they are removed the birds will search out the remaining grubs, especially if the soil under the tree is lightly stirred occasionally.

APPEARS AS SMALL FLY

In Spring, the pest appears as a small fly which "string" the leaf, depositing an egg inside the leaf. As soon as the weather becomes warm, the egg hatches into the grub which commences to feed on the "green meat" of the leaf, causing the brown patches to appear.

The way to stop this attack is to spray a preventive material on the front of the leaves in early April. A good mixture to use is:

1 gallon water
1 pound cheap molasses
1 tablespoon nicotine sulphate or similar material

Since the pests may fly or float on the wind from other trees in the neighborhood, it is advised that the spray be used each year, if necessary, before they arrive, as a preventive measure.

D.D.T. IS BETTER

During the past three years, most gardeners have found that the 50% Wettable D.D.T. has given 100% results in the control of this pest. They have applied it because the material was being used for Tent Caterpillars and other pests in early April and the holly tree could be sprayed at the same time.

GREEN MOLD ON HOLLY

On many holly trees, especially where they are in partial shade, there is a green powdery mold that appears on the leaves and stems.

This may be sprayed whenever it is noticed—using a good oil or copper spray as a fungicide. When spraying, take care to "drench" all the tree.

Grass Is Always Greener On Flower Show Lawns

By RICHARD KLEINER

FELLOW gardeners, we've been had. I've just been studying lawns at the International Flower Show in New York. You might call it a survey at the grassroots level.

And I've discovered a positive scandal. It turns out that Mother Nature is mixed up in some pretty shady goings-on, horticulturally speaing.

It was Erhard Heinrichs, the manager of the 35th Flower Show, who put me wise. As an old crab-grass cultivator, I was admiring the lush green lawns that peeked out between the petunias, pansies and portulaca.

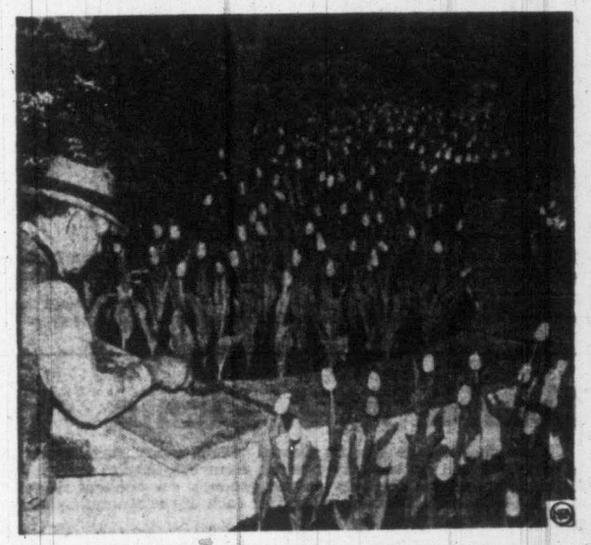
"How do they get the grass so green?" I asked innocently.

"That," said Heinrichs, "isn't grass. It's hay."

And then the whole sordid story came out. It seems the exhibitors are using ringers for grass. Real grass isn't grassy enough. Youthful hay looks grassier.

A couple of weeks before the show, they plant hay seed by the flat-full. It's mostly timothy, with a little rye thrown in. Just before the show opens, the flats of pseudo-grass are brought in and planted. And all the customers come away with the idea that they've seen some really high-grade lawns.

Actually, all they've seen is the makings of a medium-to-fair pasture. It's Mother Nature, in her infinite wisdom, who perpetrated the hoax and made young hay look greener than grass.



TULIPS REALLY GROW in the concrete fields of Grand Central Palace for the Flower Show, but the grass is an illusion.

FROM COLD CEMENT

Heinrichs has charge of turning the gigantic Grand Central Palace into a blooming garden in less than a week. He converts three acres of cold cement into a flowery wonderland in the time it takes an amateur gardener to weed his zinnias.

His is a year-around job, from June to June. (Scandinavian-born Heinrichs calls it "Tune to Yune.") He'll start planning next year's blossom extravaganza as soon as this year's closes.

Each exhibitor decides what he wants to show in the fall, then spends the winter forcing the plants in a greenhouse. Most of the stuff is grown in pots, and the whole thing, pot and all, replanted in the Flower Show setting.

FORCING, FINE ART

Forcing, said Heinrichs, is a fine art. Start too soon and the flowers have finished flowering by Flower Show time. Too late and all you've got is a plant-full of bouncing baby buds, which won't win any prizes. It's done on a time schedule that rival an airline.

About a week before the show opens, Heinrichs and a crew of 95 men move in. First they build wooden six-inch curbs, to set off the garden areas. Then these are waterproofed with roofing material. Each exhibitor then takes over, planting within the curbs.

The final step is bringing in the alleged grass. The lawns look green and decent, but they're phony. Every last blade is a fraud. From now on, I'll stick to honest, upstanding weeds.

QUIZZING THE GARDENER

Q—Please give directions for using manure in a hotbed. Would a winter's accumulation of chicken manure be satisfactory? J. B.

A—Chicken manure, because of its composition, is not recommended. Fresh stable manure of sufficient quantity to fill the hotbed should be placed under cover. When it begins to steam well fork it over so that what was inside is on the outside. In a few days repeat this process and then pack tightly into the hotbed, tramping it firmly along the sides, especially in the corners. The layer should be 20 to 24 inches thick. When evenly packed cover with four to six inches of finely sifted soil, or sand if seed is to be sown in flats. Put the sash on snugly and let stand for several days until the soil temperature falls to 90 degrees. Then it is safe to sow seed.

Q—Of what value is a mulch of peat moss on the soil about roses? D. S.

A—It keeps the soil surface from direct contact with the wind, warm dry air, and direct rays of the sun. In many cases, especially roses, the greatest benefit of a mulch is in keeping the soil loose and porous, increasing its ability to absorb and retain moisture.

Q—Can African violets be grown from seed? L. H. K.

A—Yes, if you have the know-how. Seed, which is as fine as face powder, is available at a few seed houses. Under favorable conditions, bloom will appear in seven to 10 months after germination. Growers prefer to sow seed in late autumn.

Q—Nothing will grow in my copped "planter's plate." The holder is not large enough for a pot, and the leaves of plants put directly in the copper holder turn brown and wilt. How can this be prevented? D. P.

A — The average "planter's successful culture of house plate" is much too shallow for plants. Also there is no chance for drainage, so the soil becomes waterlogged. Overwatering, not the copper plate, is the reason why the leaves turn brown and wither. A soil mixture of sand, loam and vermiculite plus careful watering and the use of shallow rooting plants might prove satisfactory.

Q—We have difficulty carrying our hybrid deyphiniums over winter. What suggestion can you give?

A — Delphiniums wil. survive if planted in a well-drained, friable soil. Winter-killing is bound to occur if the soil is heavy and holds excessive amounts of surface water, a condition causing ice to form under the crowns and thus cracking them off. Slightly hilling up with soil over the crown after the first frost should prevent water from settling about the crowns.

Swanson One Of Greatest All-Rounders

By DAN DANIEL

NEW YORK (NEA) — If Mickey Mantle has accomplished nothing else, the Yankees' phenomenal recruit has revived interest in speed achievements in baseball.

Not since Ben Chapman stole 61 bases in 1931 has there been so much talk at the Stadium about fast moving. In Brooklyn, the aficionados are reminded of Pistol Pete Reiser, when he came up from Elmira in 1940.

Before Mantle starts doing any base-stealing, he will have to establish himself as a fixture on the New York club.

In the meantime, he will specialize in bunting enterprises patterned after the drag.

Precisely how fast Mantle can run very likely will be settled in the not-too-distant future. Possibly during the Old-Timers' festivities with which the Yankees will celebrate 50 years of American League competition, in June.

There is talk of sending Mantle against the record of 13 2-5 seconds for circling the bases, held in the majors by Evar Swanson and in the minors by Maurice Archdeacon.

Archdeacon set his mark in 1921, while with Rochester. Swanson turned in his mark, Sept. 15, 1929, when with the Reds.

Swanson was one of the greatest all-around athletes yet seen in the majors. At Lombard College in Illinois, he held three records—9 4/5 seconds for the 100, 21 2/5 for the 220, and 23 feet in the broad jump.

Not until 1907 did major league fans become interested in feats of speed. That summer, little Tommy Leach of the Pirates set the first official record for circling the bases at 14 1/5 seconds.

Three years later, Hans Lobert challenged the mark, and a four-man race was arranged. Lobert and Ward Miller represented Cincinnati and Vince Campbell and Dots Miller dashed for the Pirates.

Lobert and Campbell were caught in 14 seconds, and when they ran off the tie, Hans clipped the mark to 13 4/5. Leach went after the new record, but could do no better than 14. With slides to first and third, he made it in 16 1/5, and that still stands.

George Washington Case of the Senators, who stole 61 bases in 1943, never took a crack at Swanson's figure.

Managers usually do not encourage speed tests as they fear injuries.

A Great Trio To Have In One's Outfield

WHY PITCHERS GO BATTY—If a major league manager could have his choice it is inconceivable that the threesome of American League sluggers shown here would be termed unacceptable. Joe DiMaggio, left, one of the all time greats; Bill Goodman, centre, 1950 batting champion, and Ted Williams, whose feats with the Boston Red Sox are legendary.

Entire Yankee Club Adopts Strong Boy

By HARRY GRAYSON

NEW YORK—(NEA)—Mickey Mantle walks with a slight limp.

The Yankees' story-book 19-year-old was asked if osteomyelitis four inches above his left ankle ever gives him trouble.

"Only when I play a doubleheader," replied young Mantle, "and go to a carnival and walk and stand around for two or three hours."

Mickey Mantle

The callow towhead was asked what he thought when he first saw Yankee Stadium.

"That was last September when the Yankees brought me in from Joplin," he said. "It looked easy to hit homers near the foul lines."

He was asked how he felt opening the season with the Yankees.

"I sure had butterflies in my stomach," he said, "but Joe took care of me."

He never takes his eyes off DiMaggio, and the Clipper keeps both bulbs on him. The entire Yankee club has adopted the big, smiling kid from the lead and zinc country.

Mantle is the youngest player ever to perform with the Bombers, the first to hop directly from class C.

It's difficult to imagine a young player as good as Mantle, but there he is in right field, and batting third, where swung the immortal Babe Ruth and Tommy Henrich.

"One of my grandfathers threw right-handed, the other left," he explains, "and they pitched to me. Switch hitting just came naturally."

Strong Boy has twin 15-year-old brothers, Ray and Roy, reported to be as good as he was at that age. The line forms at left.

The Yankees, especially Tom Morgan, the kid pitcher from Binghamton, keep asking Mantle for his autograph.

Mantle couldn't resist taking a peek at the comic page of a newspaper being read by a man in a hotel lobby.

"Come on, Mickey," said Morgan, his roommate, "that's one paper you won't see your picture in."

Driving through the New York tenement district for the first time, en route from the Bronx' Grand Concourse to Ebbets Field for a pre-season exhibition, Mantle wanted to know "where all these kids get to play." Where he comes from, Commerce, Okla., a kid only has to step through a door to get in a game.

Mantle is the most muscular kid you ever looked at. You see the cords in his big neck when he swings. He has the arms of a blacksmith.

How Not To Walk In Six Silly Lessons

Are you a dragger, toe dancer, heel knocker, shifter, dipper, or stutterer? According to shoe manufacturers who have made a study of walkers, the answer is probably "Yes!" To find out the horrid truth, consult your best friends or the illustrations below. Then quietly walk over to the mirror and practice placing the ball of the foot down first and the toe next. This may not be much fun, but it's the proper way to walk.

THE STUTTERER walks in such uneven rhythm his next step may be four times as big as the last one. This is one reason why stutterers are so good at multiplication. Manholes are a stutterer's biggest problem.

THE DIPPER puts so much weight on one foot that his knee is constantly buckling. The bemused belle above is not sure whether she has a shy suitor or a "Big Dipper" on her hands. "Little Dippers bemuse, too.

HEEL-KNOCKERS are worse than leftover knockwurst. For one thing, they knock the rear of one shoe against the other, wearing out both shoes and trouser cuffs. And because they won't back up for anyone, they're sometimes called "Heels."

TOE DANCERS are adept at sneaking into the house late at night after being out with the boys. They walk on the balls of their feet, like frustrated ballet stars and sometimes get an assist from the bartender.

SHIFTERS can't stand in one position for long because their feet hurt so much. Some have the shifts so bad they migrate to New York just to hang from subway straps. Others play football or walk on their hands.

THE DRAGGER does exactly that. As a result, his soles almost always look like they are on their last legs. Draggers are often found in brakeless jalopies, dragging in a way that leaves their feet tired.

TIME OUT!

"Now I'll just let you decide where you want to go on Mother's Day. Mom—roller derby, ball game, golf match, tennis tournament."

TIME OUT!

"I'm sure the television audience is thrilled, Hanson—now get up there and hit."

Board O.K.'s Flutter On Dogs, Ponies Pools

By EDWIN S. JOHNSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP) — After two years of fact-finding, the royal commission on gaming has given the green light to the little guy who likes to have his occasional "flutter" on the horses, greyhounds or football pools.

In its report, a massive volume of more than 100,000 words, the commission has absolved the small-time punter of any taint of law-breaking or moral lapse. It finds, in fact, that four out of five adults in every walk of life have gambled at some time, even if only at such trivial things as raffles, whist drives or a private sweepstake.

The investigators saw absolutely nothing wrong with that.

Answering those who denounce gambling as leading to juvenile delinquency, crime, poverty and diversion from work, the report says: "It is extremely difficult to establish by abstract arguments that all gambling is inherently immoral, without adopting views as to the nature of good and evil which would not find general acceptance among moralists."

It agrees, however, that gambling, like other indulgences, such as alcoholic drink or tobacco, should be kept within reasonable bounds and controlled with prudence.

Some eye-opening figures on the extent of betting in Britain, are contained in the report. It estimates that more than 15,000,000 people last year wagered about £150,000,000 ($450,000,000) on football pools, horse-racing and the greyhounds. Of this amount, however, approximately £70,000,000 went to cover profits, operating costs and taxes.

The various gambling ventures employ around 50,000 full-time workers with 30,000 more on part-time.

Festival Is Lusty Infant

By AUDREY ST.D. JOHNSON

WITH 30 more classes, four halls instead of three, five adjudicators instead of four, more candidates this year than last, the new postwar Victoria Musical Festival is a thriving infant who will obviously continue in health and prosperity under the guidance of the capable committees which have fostered it so far — but particularly with the care and interest of the whole of the music-loving public!

Two well known Victoria musicians are presently residing in the old-world university town of Leiden, in Holland. For Pierre Timp it is a renewal of acquaintance and early scenes for this was his birthplace. For his Canadian wife, Grace, it is all new and quite wonderful.

In a recent letter she tells something of the journey and the vivid experiences she is storing up. Naturally, two such people cannot travel without having some musical adventures. Theirs began in New York where they heard Nadine Connor sing the leading role in "The Magic Flute" at the Metropolitan; were in the NBC radio audience when Bidu Sayao and Guiseppi Valdengo sang as guests of the Telephone Hour, and heard the Philharmonic in Carnegie Hall with Leonard Bernstein conducting. A CBS station was arranged for Mr. Timp but they sailed from New York without hearing the result.

Their two-week crossing of the Atlantic was made in rough weather and on the third day out, the ship's pianist broke a finger. Mrs. Timp stepped into the breach and, teamed with the violinist and cellist, spent many hours making music for the other pasengers.

But the best times of all were, as she says in her letter, "whenever we three had an opportunity of getting together, with Pierre as an appreciative audience of one." Then they played Bach, Beethoven, Max Bruch, etc. and really revelled in a mutual appreciation of this rich diet of chamber music.

Since they have been "over" the Timps have been in touch with Irene Byatt and reaffirm that the Victoria girl is happy, progressing rapidly and has many wonderful opportunities in store.

* * *

The Victoria Theatre Guild is approaching the conclusion of its first season under that name. There is every indication that it has been a thoroughly successful season, with the biggest membership role—close to 500—and the most sustained activity in its combined histories.

A fact that may have been forgotten by many people is, that what is now the Theatre Guild, began life 21 years ago as the Mimes and Masquers' Guild. A pun that grew up around the name converting it occasionally to "Marms' and Masters' Guild" is reported to have resulted in the first change of name; actually the deciding influence was the strong "little theatre" movement that was stirring across Canada at the beginning of the 1930's.

Victoria Little Theatre it became and remained until last fall when the amalgamation wi the Victoria Players' Guild took place. Players' Guild members, incidentally, were almost 100 per cent old Little Theatre-ites.

So the Theatre Guild, while new in name, spirit and constitution, has a background and some tradition to which it can point with pride. This season has added considerably to that record. "The Silver Cord," which will be the last major production before the summer vacation, is due to open shortly. A stirring drama concerning a mother's fatal grip on the lives of her two sons, it should place a powerful period to the series which has consisted of "I Remember Mama," "The Shop at Sly Corner," "The Silver Whistle," "Hay Fever" and "Good-Bye, My Fancy."

Enforcement Lottery Laws Is Variable

Bingos and automobile raffles may be illegal, but you wouldn't know it in many Canadian centres.

Both are outlawed under anti-gambling provisions of the Criminal Code of Canada. Enforcement of these provisions rests with the provinces, though some leave prosecution to the discretion of municipalities.

Quebec takes a strong hand on bingos, which are banned both by provincial and church authorities. The only exceptions are games played for a maximum charge of 10 cents a person at county fairs and similar functions.

But automobile raffles are prevalent in Quebec during the summer mnths, as gaily-placarded cars are driven through the streets or parked in strategic spots to catch the attention of prospective customers.

VANCOUVER CRACK-DOWN

Vancouver cracked down on car raffles last summer, banning the sidewalk sale of tickets. Lotteries with prizes of less than $50 are permitted, and the Pacific National Exhibition is permitted to hold automobile draws during its 10-day run.

The Ontario government leaves car-lottery prosecutions to municipalities, few of which interfere with them. But it bans bingos, making occasional exceptions only when the fuctions are run for the benefit of charitable organizations.

DAYTIME television may not have a very high rating with the professional critics but its shows mean a great deal to the audiences who tune them in day after day, according to Ed Herlihy.

The announcer, commentator and master of ceremonies, long a fixture in radio and the newsreels, says that his favorite work has become his NBC day-time TV show, "Date in Manhattan."

"It may sound corny," Herlihy said, "but the day-time audience is really one big happy family. I'm strictly a family man, with three gun-totin' Hopalongs running around the house.

"If I mention the kids on a show, I'm sure to get letters inquiring about their health and how they're getting along in school. The viewers not only write me about their problems, they send me advice about mine."

WOMEN LIKE SHOWS

Day-time viewers tend to adopt the performers they see on their TV screens, Herlihy said.

"The reason for all this loyalty and interest is fairly simple," he continued. "The audience consists mostly of women. The rest are shut-ins and hospitalized veterans. These people don't watch just for entertainment. They're lonely.

"The housewife is alone during the day and looks for company in her living room while she's doing her boring chores. We become her friends on the first visit. After we're in her living room a few times, we're members of the family. So when they write to us, it's on intimate terms."

Omaha, Neb., had waited a long time to see Henry Fonda, a home town boy, in "Mister Roberts," so it didn't let a little thing like one of the Midwest's worst storms of the winter interfere.

Fonda and his company left Minneapolis on a Sunday for the normally eight-hour trip to Omaha where they were to open on Monday for a three-day stand. They arrived 52 hours later on Tuesday. Omaha radio stations had kept listeners advised on the matter and there was a capacity house when the troupe put on its first performance at 6.30 p.m. Tuesday for those who had held tickets for Monday night. The play was done without scenery or costumes, which still were not available.

At 9 p.m. the same day there was a performance for Tuesday night ticket-holders, again without costumes and scenery. Immediately after that performance, the scenery was hung and the costumes arrived at the theatre for normal matinee and evening performances on Wednesday. It was capacity at all times, with receipts over $21,000.

RECORD REVIEWS

Two young women with new records require respect. One is Susan Reed, who essays the passionate, varied, elusively difficult folk songs of the Auvergne (Columbia; 12-inch LP.) The other is Michele Auclair, who at 21 plays Tchaikovsky's violin concerto with digital finesse and an appealing interpretation not borrowed but her very own (Remington; 12-inch LP.)

On her "B" side, Miss Reed sings such songs as "Turtle Dove" and "Gentle Johnny, My Jingalo," in such a way that her young, sweet-breathed freshness is like country air in city lungs.

In more fiddle-playing, Isaac Stern tears through the Mendelsohn E minor concerto, with the Philadelphia Orchestra under Ormandy, with a ferocity almost terrifying and certainly compelling (Columbia; 12-inch LP.)

On the other hand, Ossy Renardy, with the Amsterdam Concertgebouw under Munch, makes lace of the Brahms' D major concerto (London; 12-inch LP.)

With Mischa Elman's playing of Wieniawski's D minor concerto, assisted by the Robin Hood Dell Orchestra under Hilsberg there is no mannerism but only the gorgeous Elman tone to identify the player (RCA Victor; 10-inch LP.)

Hollywood Film Shop

By PATRICIA CLARY

A YOUNG Hollywood actress says she goes on a diet frequently to remind herself of the days when she couldn't afford to buy a meal.

Every time she misses a meal by choice, Helen Westcott said, it impresses on her that she has to work hard so she won't go back to the days when she missed meals by necessity.

Miss Westcott, a beautiful blonde, was Gregory Peck's leading lady in a recent film and now is appearing in the 20th Century-Fox film, "The Secret of Convict Lake," with Glenn Ford and Gene Tierney.

Her accomplishments would indicate that Miss Westcott's career is rapidly fattening and so is her bank account. Missing dinner is what she calls "career discipline."

"I do it to remind myself of hungrier days," she said. "In the formative years of my career I had to live many days on nothing but rice or hot dogs and doughnuts. On an empty stomach I naturally found myself striving for improvement, to be a better actress, a better person. You can't imagine how charming a girl can be when she wants nothing more than a New York steak dinner.

Art In Review

ON THE 70th anniversary of Fernand Leger there are two judiciously-selected exhibitions of his paintings on view. The one at Janis shows his early work. The other at Carre is a more general retrospective.

Modern artists mirror instinctively the modern concepts of life. The great Parisians have been striving intuitively at the creation of an artistic order that was not built on a hierarchy, but on the equality of all parts in a picture.

The cubists arrived at this "democratization" of the picture plan by reducing the individual, accidental shapes of the appearance to their corresponding geometric ideals. Their interest was limited to fragments of their immediate surroundings.

Leger has been less interested in total equality in a restricted world than in the functional relationships of modern society.

He has sacrificed much of the cubists' tenderness and their sensual comprehension of intimate detail in favour of broad schematizations of the mechanisms in industrial society.

Leger believes that the exaggerated subjectivism that results from an inflated individualism is hampering the development of modern art. He says that in the art of the future, the subject will be subordinated to the object. Instead of projecting his expressive subjectivism into inanimate objects, the artist of the future will picture men as objectively as if they were clouds, machines or trees. And it is as the pioneer of this coming objective art that Leger sees his own role in the history of painting.

A thorough exposition of what is happening to our greatest natural resources — water — is contained in Water — or Your Life, by Arthur H. Carhart (Lippincott). Written in a simple, interesting style, the book points to vital problems concerning water that must be solved in the not too distant future. The increasing demands of industry on underground water, the pollution of streams, erosion of top soil, destruction of forests, construction of power dams, increasing population, all are related and must be understood by enough people to make conservation possible. This is a primer toward that understanding . . .

Volume IV of The Journals of Andre Gide, translated from the French by Justin O'Brien (Knopf) brings the publication of his diary jottings up to June 10, 1949. This volume reveals Gide's reactions (between his 70th and 80th years) to the events of World War 11, the fall of his native France, his flight to and life in North Africa and the invasion of the Americans . . .

The Man On the Coach by James D. Proctor, (Dial): Amusing, sardonic account of the chaos which nearly engulfs a prosperous suburban couple when they are visited by an old friend (female) who has been undergoing psychoanalysis.

All who have smarted or fumed helplessly at the hands of this type of parlor dilettante will rejoice in Proctor's hearty satire.

New Novels

Insurrection, by Liam O'Flaherty (Little, Brown): A tale of romance and violence based on the Irish Easter insurrection in in Dublin in 1916. . . .

Clouds in the Wind, by F. L. Green (Coward-McCann): The story of Frank Chester and the impact of present-day stresses on his marriage and life. An acute analysis of character.

Candles for Therese, by I. A. R. Wylie Random House): Richard Clyde, posing as an artist in a French village, seeks out a traitor who turned his half-brother and other resistance heroes over to the Nazis during the occupation. The climax of the search is as moving as it is unexpected. . . .

Hangasman, by Shirley Jackson (Farrar, Straus and Young): The emergence of a 17-year-old from adolescence is a time of great emotional tumult as Natalie Waite discovered in this sensitively told story. . . .

Wine of Violence, by Ralph Ingersoll (Farrar, Straus & Young) offers a heady mixture of sex and war. Told against a background of the London blitz and the Allied invasion of France, it is the story of how a frustrated but faithful wife and an American staff officer disillusioned by too many love affairs finally find their destiny behind enemy lines in an abandoned chateau in the Ardennes forest during the Battle of the Bulge. . . .

ROSAMUND RAND

Sentimental Nostalgia To Documentaries

"I'll appraise books—and do four out of seven evenings willingly. But I simply won't chase funerals," gentle Rosamund Rand told me fiercely, her dark eyes glinting near-sightedly behind thick lashes.

She referred to certain practices among some secondhand book sellers.

Rosamund Rand owns The Haunted Bookshop on Fort Street, On its crowded shelves I've been able to find most anything in the way of books I've wanted from sentimental nostalgia to documentaries. If not immediately then within a few weeks or maybe months when Rosamund has had time to track them down.

Rosamund Rand is a granddaughter of Alexander Caulfield Anderson, one of the West's earliest explorers. According to Bruce McKelvie historian, he was the enterprising and well educated son of an Indian Army officer and born in India. Factor of Fort Alexandria in the Chilcotin Country in 1846, he made his business to take a band of Indians and discover a new way to the Pacific, when the Columbia River became American.

Rosamund used to visit cousins in Victoria as a child. Since then she has spent many long years from the Island. But it was here her always intense love of books received an unhappy impetus. She learned that in all probability she would go blind, and started to read even more voraciously than before, cramming her mind and imagination with literature. Fortunately it didn't happen and she has been able to put that reading to good account. "I'm no scholar," she disclaims, "but I usually know where to find things."

Being a regular customer at the Haunted Bookshop doesn't necessitate buying. Often it means browsing undisturbed in a book you feel you can't afford, day after day until you've finished it. Sometimes it means cups of coffee. If Rosamund likes the cut of your jib and the way you handle her precious editions, you drift into becoming a member of what amounts in a vague sort of way to a kind of club at the back of the narrow shop. There, in the vicinity of an electric kettle, settled in a chair from which you've probably had to lift a pile of books, you can usually enjoy a jag of conversation with other people who are batty about books.—Gwen Cash.

Alberto Moravia, whose treatment of prostituution in The Woman of Rome and adolescent sex in Two Adolescents won wide critical acclaim, turns his sensitive hand to love and sex in marriage withe equal success in Conjugal Love (Farrar, Straus). It is the story of Silvio Baldeschi, whose vanity and hopeless ambition to become a great writer send his beautiful wife into a sordid seduction and almost wreck their marriage permanently.

FOR THE BOYS IN GREY — This 3-cent stamp, commemorating the final reunion of the United Confederate Veterans, will be placed on sale first in Norfolk, Va., on May 30, the opening day of the reunion. The grey stamp depicts a Confederate veteran as he is today and as he appeared as a youth 86 years ago. There are seven known surviving Confederate veterans.

Romance Background Of International Intrigue

They Came to Baghdad, by Agatha Christie (Collins) 256 pp.

THE writer of 50 detective novels and thrillers has come up this time with a gripping yarn of romance against a background of international intrigue. A young London typist, Victoria Jones, by a queer series of events finds herself in Baghdad and drawn willy-nilly into the mysterious doings of a sinister ring of would-be world masters.

Here are all the trappings of spies and counter-spies — an operative disguised as a ragged Arab who clicks out a Morse message on a string of amber beads, the familiar intricate searches of luggage, disguises and impersonations, kidnappings, and the death of a fugitive in Victoria's hotel bed.

Mrs. Christie has let out all the stops on this one. She falters in one or two minor details —an American type who uses the expression "I fancy she's interviewing someone" strikes a false note—but the action is swift and direct. A projected meeting in Baghdad between the president of the United States and the premier of the U.S.S.R. ties the story in with current world problems, and the global network of evil planners is at least as plausible as many of today's incredible developments.

There is a good flavor of the East—the bazaars, the dim courtyards, the shadowed comings and goings. And although the surprise ending entails a sudden reversal which the conscientious amateur sleuth may feel a little unfair, the genuine excitement of the chase makes this a good book of its kind.—T.B.

Love Story Of War Years Features 7 Fateful Days

All Else Is Folly, by Catherine Gaskin (Collins), 256 pp.

THIS book would have made a nice serial for a woman's magazine of the Ladies' Home Journal type. It is a well worked out love story with a novel twist.

Susan Taite had married an R.A.F. officer in the hectic war years but like so many of those affairs, the marriage crashed. Susan, who had been working in an embassy in London, eventually left for her native America where she became fashion editor of a "slick" magazine.

For six years she had received no word from her husband and in the meantime had succumbed to the blandishments of her wealthy employer.

Miss Gaskin's story is limited in time to seven fateful days she spent with her lover in London seeking her husband with the object of persuading him to agree to a divorce.

The twist in the story is that she learns there was good reason for her husband's silence, a fact that changes her purpose.

With mature wisdom and a sure sense of drama the author tells of Susan's struggle between her strong attraction for her charming and wealthy employer and her conflicting desire to wipe out the humiliation of her earlier failure by picking up the broken threads of her marriage again.—A.M.T.

Damned Old Crank, Story Of Scripps Newspaper Founder

In any history of American journalism the name of E. W. Scripps is bound to figure prominently. He founded newspapers, acquired others and increased his and his family's holdings until his "empire" included nearly forty newspapers plus many related journalistic enterprises. The climax of his career was the founding, in 1907, of the United Press, to secure "freedom from the temptation of one huge news monopoly." He considered it his greatest achievement. Now, 25 years after his death, Scripps' autobiography has been published, consisting of random notes which he kept on his personal life, his business ventures and his philosophy. Edited by Charles R. McCabe, husband of one of Scripps' granddaughters, the revealing self-portrait is entitled Damned Old Crank (Harper). Scripps was proud of the appellation "crank" believing it epitomized his distinction from more ordinary men. He was proud of most of his qualities which he said included an inordinate capacity for liquor, cigars, and the ability to choose good executives and make money. What this extraordinary personal account lacks in modesty and warmth it makes up in frankness, and constitutes an entertaining and instructive view of the private life of one of the most powerful figures in American journalism. . . . MEAT ESSENTIAL IN BABY'S DIET

BABY doesn't have to wait long these days to get his first taste of meat. The changing schedule, of course, is in line with scientific recognition of the superior contribution of meat in essential body-building proteins. Writing on "Protein in the Child's Diet," Dr. L. Emmett Holt, Associate Professor of Pediatrics, Johns Hopkins University says:

"The child must be given relatively more protein than the adult; the younger he is, the greater is his need for protein food. The young infant requires roughly 4 grams of protein per kilo each day, a quantity approximately double that which is necessary for an adult."

Naturally the age at which meat is introduced into an infant's diet depends upon the needs and development of the individual baby, and the orders of the doctor who has been watching the child's progress.

RIGHT TO TASTE

The early starting of baby on his first tastes of smooth strained meat is no longer a heavy chore for his busy mother. Experts in meat packing are catering meats right to baby's taste, ready to warm slightly or combine with other foods.

One baby meat producer now offers six strained meats, which have the added advantage of low fat content. Controlling fat has been one of the problems that has plagued the packers of strained and junior meats.

Even the use of extra lean cuts did not always result in a product acceptable for the very young. Extra digestibility is claimed for these low-fat content meats, along with true flavor and color.

"Hope they're cookin' up something to keep us healthy."

CREAMED VEAL AND EGG
(Makes 2 servings)

One tablespoon butter or fortified margarine, 1 tablespoon all-purpose flour, ½ cup whole milk, 1 can (3½ ounce) junior veal, 1 hard-cooked egg, chopped fine, salt to taste.

Melt fat, add flour. Blend well. Gradually add milk. Cook until thick. (Cook over low heat or in top of double boiler.) Add chopped meat and egg. Season to taste. Serve on toast, fluffy rice or baked potato halves.

With lemon cream dressing—delightful dish for the youngsters.

Cottage Cheese Is Appealing

COTTAGE cheese is high on the list of foods valuable in children's diets. It is a very substantial dairy food, rich in protein, calcium and other essential minerals and is also inexpensive and easy to serve.

Serve it mixed with a little cream and finely chopped scallions or pickles and whipped with sour cream and salt and spooned over chopped raw vegetables. Serve it as an after-school in-between snack on crackers with tart jelly.

Here's a delightful combination—cottage cheese balls in two flavors served on crisp greens with a lemon cream dressing:

ORANGE CHEESE BALLS

One carton (8 ounce) cottage cheese, 2 tablespoons concentrated (frozen) orange juice, ¾ cup chopped walnuts.

Beat cottage cheese until creamy. Add orange juice and chopped walnuts, and blend until smooth. Form into six balls and arrange on one side of the platter. Garnish with halved walnuts.

SAVORY CHEESE BALLS

One carton (8 ounce) cottage cheese, 1 tablespoon horseradish, 2 tablespoons catsup.

Beat cottage cheese until smooth with horseradish and tomato catsup. Form into six balls and arrange on opposite side of platter to sweet cheese balls. Note: The combined salad serves 4.

LEMON CREAM DRESSING
(Makes about 1 cup)

One tablespoon lemon juice, ¾ cup mayonnaise, 1 tablespoon sugar, ¾ cup whipping cream.

Combine lemon juice, mayonnaise and sugar. Partially whip cream and fold in. Serve with cottage cheese salad.

Important Tips On Feeding Toddlers

Child experts have a few sensible eating tips for baby. Take a look at them—they may make mealtime more successful for your babies.

They warn over-eager fathers against bouncing the baby about just before his feeding. What baby needs most at that time is relaxation or quiet games. Keep the paternal roughhousing for another time of baby's day.

Here are five more practical tips:

1. Hot and cold foods are tempered for small folks: "Hot" foods should be served lukewarm; "cold" with chill removed. Pour milk from refrigerated bottles ahead of time, so it will be nearer room temperature.

2. Moderate seasonings, too. Lively curry and paprika are not for the young. They thrive on bland food, uniform in texture and consistency.

3. "Pass your plate, please." Small servings encourage young eaters. Introduce new foods a spoonful at a time. A strange food that is resisted today will be accepted tomorrow.

4. Variety builds an all-around acceptance of good foods that is carried over into adult life. Color contrast tempts lagging appetites. Golden foods are popular, such as strained sweet potatoes, squash, carrots — all excellent sources of vitamin A.

5. Comfort counts. Easy-to-handle dishes that are bright and preferably unbreakable. Small spoons with a shallow rounded bowl and short handle. Choose a blunt-tined fork or adult's salad fork for young beginners. Use easy-to-clean table mats. Make sure the child's chair is adjusted for eating comfort.

LAMB MOUSSE
(4-6 servings)

One tablespoon gelatin (1 envelope), ¼ cup cold water, 2 egg yolks, slightly beaten, ⅔ cup milk, ½ chicken bouillon cube, 2 cans (3½ ounce) strained lamb, ¼ cup whipping cream, salt to taste.

Soften gelatin in cold water. Combine egg yolks, milk and bouillon cube in top of double boiler. Cook and stir until thickened. Add softened gelatin, stirring until dissolved. Add strained lamb. Cool mixture.

Whip cream until stiff. Fold into lamb mixture. Add salt if necessary. Pour into slightly greased 1 pint mold and chill until firm.

TOMORROW'S MENU

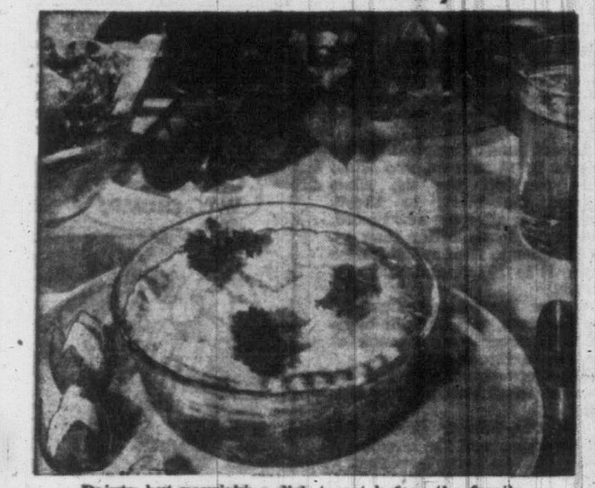
BREAKFAST: Orange juice, soft-cooked eggs, rye toast, butter or fortified margarine, apple jelly, coffee, milk.

MOTHER-TODDLER LUNCHEON: Minced leftover chicken, baked potato, wholewheat bread, butter or fortified margarine, grated carrot and raisin salad, strained apricots, tea, milk.

WARM EVENING DINNER: Hot beef vegetable soup in cups, crackers, lamb mousse garnished with sliced tomatoes, radishes, cucumber sticks and watercress, potato chips, ready-mix hot biscuits or corn muffins, butter or fortified margarine, chocolate layer cake, coffee, milk.

Note: For older juniors and their parents the lamb mousse is a delicious warm day recipe.

Little Veal Pies Dainty Dish



Dainty but nourishing dish to set before the family.

Now here's a dainty dish to set before the king, or any other members of a hungry family.

LITTLE VEAL PIES

One-fourth cup flour, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 cup cold chicken broth or bouillion, 1 cup of hot chicken broth or bouillion, 1 cup cooked peas, ¾ cup sliced cooked mushrooms, 2½ cups diced cooked veal, 6 small onions.

Crust—1½ cups sifted flour, ¼ teaspoon baking powder, ⅔ teaspoon salt, ⅔ cup shortening, 5 to 6 tablespoons ice water.

Garnish—18 small springs of parsley.

1. Mix together ¼ cup flour, one teaspoon salt and one cup cold chicken broth or bouillion to form a smooth paste. Add to one cup hot chicken broth or bouillion and cook over low heat until thick and no starchy taste remains. Stir constantly.

2. Add peas, mushrooms and veal; continue cooking for about two minutes longer or until vegetables and meat are heated through.

3. Parboil onions for 10 minutes. Place one onion in each of six well-greased heat-resistant glass deep pie dishes, 9½-ounce size. Fill with veal mixture.

4. Crust: Sift together 1½ cups flour, baking powder and ½ teaspoon salt. Cut in shortening until it is the size of peas. Add ice water a little at a time, mixing only enough to hold ingredients together.

5. Place dough on lightly floured board and roll to about ⅛ inch thickness. Cut six circles the size of the top of the deep pie dishes. Gash circles of dough to allow steam to escape. Place circles on top of veal filling.

6. Bake in hot oven (425 degrees F.) for about 25 minutes or until crust is browned. Garnish with parsley for serving.

Mealtime Should Always Be Pleasant

How happy is mealtime in your house? Many a doctor asks that question in an effort to trace repeated digestive upsets among youngsters. Often the trouble is directly related to a family habit of "having it out" around the dinner table.

The bickering might centre around Jimmy's report card or his table manners, but the end of the meal found his resentfuul and "all riled up."

Nagging disturbs both disposition and appetite. Perpetual hurry and tension at mealtime soon build up unpleasant food associations in the child's mind.

The main meal can provide the most congenial hour of the day, offering good food and good talk and simple lessons in the appreciationo ff ood. or small ones learn while they eat.

Often the first tastes, the likes and dislikes copied from elders at the table, will carry on through adult life. Every child is a copycat, so make sure that he copies good food habits.

Even the small baby knows whether his mother enjoys feeding him, or whether she is in a hurry to bundle him off to bed. Bottle babies who are held snugly during feeding and cuddled after it, share the same reassuring sense of security as the breast-fed baby.

Fresh asparagus is in season and it contains valuable minerals for children and all the family.

When your rubber-covered dish drainer becomes worn and sticky, try this rejuvenation method before you decide it's hopeless and discard it. First wash it thoroughly and let it dry. Then coat all surfaces with a thin layer of white shellac. When this has dried, and your drainer is back in use, you'll find this protective surface will slow disintegration.

Top a fluffy wedge of angel food cake with chilled thickened apricot whole fruit nectar for a marvelous dessert. Sweeten the nectar with a little brown sugar and thicken to a runny consistency with cornstarch. During berry season toss in a couple of spoonfuls of sweetened sliced strawberries, too.

Once in a while plan potato chowder, a salad and a dessert-type of dinner for your family. Make the chowder more hearty than usual by tossing in some chunks of ripe olives and plenty of crisp crumbled bacon. We find cutting the large olives into quarters and removing one section at a time from the pit is the easiest way to get nice, chunky pieces

Cutting down on your breakfast is not the proper way to cut down your food budget. You should be getting from ¼ to ⅓ your day's total calories at this meal. Start off breakfast with a dish of prepared cereal topped with a few lightly spiced cooked prunes.

A glass of chilled apricot whole fruit nectar makes a good breakfast starter. Lace it with a little lemon juice if you like it to be a little on the tart side.

BE A LOVELY LADY, TOO, ON MOTHER'S DAY

By ALICIA HART

THERE'S a tendency among many hard-working mothers to forget they're women, too. They win the love of their children by devotion to duty. By devotion to beauty, they could gain their children's admiration as well.

This Mother's Day, make your children proud of you. Fix yourself in their memories not only as a mender of small-fry sorrows and the best cookie-maker in town, but as a lovely lady as well. It's quite as important to them. And keep it up after Mother's Day, too.

This doesn't mean you should abandon the cookie jar for a cosmetics bottle, or that you should forsake your home for a beauty salon. It does mean you should work out a program of simple beauty routines that will keep you always looking your best for your family.

If you've fallen into the habit of looking like a kitchen drudge, now's the time to work a bit of Cinderella magic with your clothes, your hair and your person in general.

Perhaps you've become accustomed to clumping around in down-at-the-heels, five-year-old shoes in order to keep your children shod in the latest styles. This, according to the experts, is a mistake.

This youthful-looking mother considers her beauty a maternal as well as a personal duty. She keeps her hair shining and well groomed, styled to suit both face and fashion (left). Small daily luxuries like dusting powder (centre) accent her womanliness. On Mother's Day she pauses before church to adjust camellia presented by her children as symbol of their pride as well as love.

Not only are you courting bitter martyrdom, but you're also taking a chance that your children will react, not with gratitude, but with shame for your appearance. If there are budget limitations, let the whole family share them equally.

Dress as well as your means will allow, remembering to suit selections to your age, your daily schedule and your personality.

And don't lavish all your time upon your children. If necessary, cut story-reading sessions by 10 minutes in order to set your hair at night. Or limit those letters to away-from-home children to three pages instead of six. Give yourself a manicure with the time you save.

If you are tempted, after supervising the scrubbing of several grimy moppets at night, to skip your bath—don't. You owe it to yourself as a woman to preserve your personal daintiness. If you make an occasion of your bath, instead of regarding it as a chore to be hurried through, you'll find it relaxing.

Pamper yourself with small luxuries like bath salts or dusting powder. You'll find the minor expense balanced by such small-fry comments as "Umm, mommie, you smell so nice." A particularly pleasant choice for young—and not-so-young—mothers is a new red lilac powder offered by one cosmetic firm.

CHANGING HAIRLINES

Shining, well-kept hair will call forth your children's admiration, whether they're still gleaning their ideas of feminine beauty from fairytales, or whether they're thinking in grown-up terms of grooming and fashion.

If you haven't given your hair any real thought since you were married, now's the time to have your hair re-styled. No matter how attractive you may have appeared on your wedding day, chances are that particular coiffure has become inappropriate. It's as important to change your hair-lines as often as your hem-lines.

Fresh-Up Aid: Soap Paper And Expansible Washcloths

Washroom fresh-ups can now be pleasurable, thanks to new aids for travelers and career girls. Soap-coated sheets (left) provide lather for thorough face-washing. Bath cloth (right) expands from tiny disk.

ANY woman who's ever tried to do an away-from home fresh-up in an office washroom or a Pullman lounge probably remembers the experience as unpleasant.

If you were unprepared, a face-washing likely required the use of harsh liquid soap or of cakes handled by strangers. Or, if you'd remembered to provide your own equipment, a scramble through suitcase or cluttered desk drawer was necessary to unearth it. Then there was the difficulty of repacking wet, sticky soap and a dripping washcloth.

These problems are solved with the introduction of two new products which provide sponge bath essentials in compact and disposable form.

A packet of pleasantly scented, soap-coated paper takes care of your sudsing. Tear out a sheet, dampen it and rub it on your face to work up a lather. Use several if necessary. Then toss the used paper away.

Since the soap sheets are packaged in a folder resembling that of safety matches, they can be easily tucked into your purse for every-ready use. When enclosed in a case of red or green plastic, the soap sheets make an interesting handbag accessory.

Another quick clean-up aid is a small mint-sized disk which opens out into a full-sized bath cloth when dipped into water. Since the disks are perfumed, they make your face-washing a particularly pleasant task. These, too, can be discarded after use.

TRIED AND TRUE TRICKS

Silk Requires Special Care

THE feeling of pampered luxury that most women derive from silk must be balanced with a bit of special care.

In this age of synthetics, it's easy to forget techniques used by our grandmothers to keep their silken garments looking spruce.

The home-made muslin garment covers used in earlier days have been largely supplanted by closet bags. The principle of protection remains the same, however. Not only are your silk dresses protected from dust, but, it's claimed, these bags slow the color deterioration that sometimes results from the chemical reaction of dye with gas fumes or with light.

There's an old-fashioned trick for dealing with water spots, too. A silk blouse, spattered as you rinse your hands, or a scarf, dotted with sprinklings from a drinking fountain, need cause no dismay—provided only clean, clear water is involved.

Allow the silk to dry thoroughly, and then rub away the spot with the edge of a nickel. Or you might try rubbing another section of the silk against the spotted area. This will work for your husband's ties as well.

Versatile Stole For Beach

By GAILE DUGAS
(NEA Staff Writer)

The stole dress, because it is versatile, is important again for summer. The stole sometimes tops a sheath, sometimes serves as a cover up for a bare-top dress. It's pretty and entirely useful. It's a handy cover up, providing protection against too much sun, too sudden breezes or the chill of a summer evening.

Stoles are dress up but they can also go to the beach. They're tailored for town, sophisticated for after-five. They have pockets, fringe or flower trim, and match or contrast with the costumes for which they're companions.

Lavender cotton broadcloth (left), is turned into a sunback dress with slim straps by Lampl. The matching stole can be worn scarf-fashion about the shoulders, tucked into the belt or draped loosely about the arms. It has pockets. The dress is simple, its bodice pin-tucked, its belt neatly tailored. The skirt is slightly full.

For an informal summer evening, broadcloth appears again (right), this time in green-and-yellow two-tone with matching stole. The dress has a fitted bodice, single strap and fly-away bow. Belt is narrow and tailored, skirt has easy lines.

Shadow Sticks For Lids

BLOTCHY eye-shadow jobs, in which the color lands everywhere but the place you intend, can now be shoved into the past, thanks to a new form of eye make-up.

This shadow is packaged in a case resembling that of a lipstick, and it can be swiveled out in the same way when you're ready to use it.

Because the color can be drawn on, with quick, easily-guided lines, you can be certain of achieving the effect you wish despite inept fingers.

A light stroke leaves a smooth even deposit of the shadow as you guide the tip, thus eliminating the unevenness of distribution that sometimes results from the old dip-and-rub method.

Begin by delicately outlining your lids, just above your lashes, pencilling from the inner corner of your eyes outward to just beyond the outer tip.

Then, with a fingertip, blend the color upward and outward, shading from dark to light. To give your lashes apparent depth, leave a dark rim along their base. Then smooth the color in progressively lighter tones until it vanishes into nothingness just below your eyebrows.

The result is a creamy, slightly lustrous make-up that is almost subtle enough to pass for nature's handiwork.

Eye shadow in new stick form enables this young woman to shade her lids quickly and surely for a well-blended natural effect.

Any metal surfaces on the exterior of your home—such as gutters, flashings, downspouts, exposed nail heads and hinges—should be painted or varnished to help off rust stains on outside walls.

TRILLIUMS IN CORNERS OF PRIMEVAL FOREST

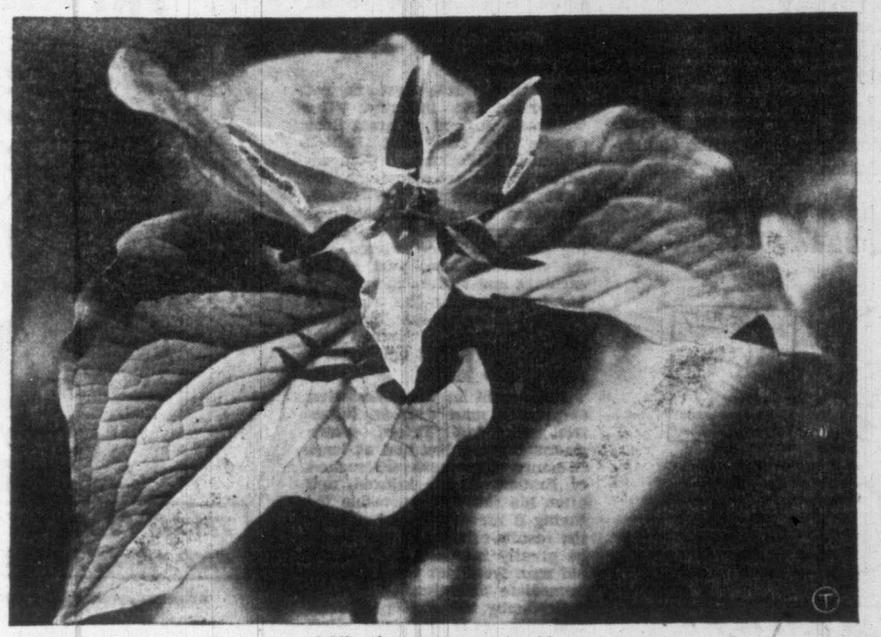
I suppose to most of us the most impressive season of the year in a new country is that of spring. I arrived in Manitoba in May when everywhere the first of seasons was showing itself. Plowing and harrowing and sowing were in swing on the farms.

Cattle and horses had discarded their winter coats for shining spring suits. The poplar bluffs were green with their young leafage, a shade darker than that of the willow scrub. Strange new flowers were springing up everywhere and strange birds from grackles to meadow larks made glad the eye and ear.

Had I spent the winter first on the prairie the contrast would of course have been even greater.

I left the already winter-held prairie of Alberta in 1901 and woke up in the train one morning at the little railway station at Mission where beds of bright summer flowers were still in full bloom.

I arrived in Victoria to see armfuls of chrysanthemums and dahlias being carried to the churches for decoration. It was a mild winter and primroses bloomed more or less throughout the season. Gorse and broom were still flowering in November. But when spring came it brought fresh surprise.



Adding beauty to countryside.

I can still see in memory the children with their arms full of wildflowers. Fawn lilies were abundant in every grassy place except where cattle grazed. Trilliums were found in all the still remaining corners of primeval forest. Toothwort or milkmaids brightened the roadside grass. Fringe-cup and spring saxifrage, that brilliant little flower collingia, familiarly known as blue-eyed-Mary; blue and yellow violets were also in this spring host.

It is pleasant to record that these flowers are still to be found in our part of the island though in diminished numbers.

Every rocky place has its wildflowers in the soil-filled crevices and in the very few remnants of forest still others linger for the delight of the persistent searcher.

Even the otherwise bare sandy soil will show in this month patches of that minute plant, the least of lesser paint-brushes, patches that look to a passing glance little more than purplish-brown stains. Two of the yellow monkey-flowers, species of mimulus, appear this month, the tall large-flowered one and the smaller one with its flowers more conspicuously spotted. The smaller species of camass sometimes blooms as early as March, but usually in May, always a little before its larger relative. The fawn lily is at times found in bloom as early as March and is quite common in April. And then as I write this the hummingbird gleams like a fiery jewel among the cherry blossoms and the violet-green swallows swing past in their great arcs of flight. The Garry oaks have hidden their tops in a green haze and the maples are hanging their pale green blossoms under their slightly greener leaves.

OF CABBAGES AND KINGS

Great Editor Made Joseph Chamberlain His Hero

WHEN Senator Margaret Chase Smith appeared as a guest on the radio program "Who Said That?" she was asked by the chairman, Bob Trout: "I know you don't want to be President, Mrs. Smith, but suppose you woke up and found yourself in the White House. What would you do?"

Senator Smith replied: "I'd go straight to Mrs. Truman and apologize and then I'd go home."

* * *

If you change into J. L. Garvin's famous biography of Joseph Chamberlain, you will be met at once by the following words: "Thus when the nurse pronounced the new infant a boy . . . the most familiar and humorous doubt that attends human affairs was resolved." When his daughter spoke to him shortly before the birth of his son he warned her that she must not be disappointed if the child turned out to be a girl. "I laughed," writes his daughter Katharine in her Memoir of her famous journalist father, "knowing it was his disappointment and not mine that he was anticipating." That was Garvin's way—he was warm, emotional, just the right man for Joe Chamberlain's biography.

In collecting materials for his famous book, Garvin was astonished to find that his hero rang doorbells and ran, like other children of his age. Garvin used to run out of his study in his dressing gown and read aloud to the family any new discoveries on his subject which he was going to include in his book. It was almost impossible to understand these things out of context and the family were often embarrassed, not knowing what to say. Garvin usually commented (to himself), "Isn't it wise and searching?"

One evening as he sat after dinner talking to a young journalist, his daughter relates, he plunged into his study to bring back a chapter which he read aloud. He stopped at intervals, gazed at the boy over his spectacles, and said: "Well, what do you think of that?" The young man kept repeating, "very good," and other expressions of approval until he finally ran out of adjectives and heard himself saying, "It's very wise and searching." Garvin paused, interdicted. He lowered his sheaf of papers and stared at the young man, and for a moment the youth was afraid that he detected a parody. But Garvin, after a long pause, said in a hushed tone: "What a wonderful thing, my boy. You choose just the words I would have chosen at your age!"

* * *

Garvin was editor of The Observer"—he made the paper. For years the greatest trouble in his life was to get it together from Thursday to Friday night—the paper was, and still is, a weekly. "Once a great friend died suddenly on a Thursday night," writes the author. There was some urgent business to be done for which Garvin's humane influence was needed. When his daughter phoned him and told him the facts: "So-and-so died last night." "Good God! On a Friday!" was his first instinctive cry.

* * *

An established author, one of the literary members of his staff, came to see Garvin, who was, as usual, very busy. "Can you give me no comfort, Mr. Garvin?" he asked after a long talk.

"No, I can give you no comfort," was Garven's answer. "There are publichouses at every corner open for false comfort."

* * *

A fitful sleeper, like many another high strung worker, Garvin would often cry out strange and unconnected remarks in his sleep. Once he had a terrible dream that Queen Victoria and the Dowager Empress of China persisted in visiting him, rolled into one. "God damn you both!" he cried out when he could bear it no longer.

Perhaps the most influential journalist of his time, Garvin shunned a knighthood for years and only in the latter years of his life did he accept the Companion of Honour from the King. Mrs. Garvin was annoyed and remarked more than once, "I shall never by Lady Garvin."

Garvin never finished his biography and young Julian Amery, author of "Sons of the Eagle," and Conservative member of Parliament is completing this monumental work.

MILLS STRIVE FOR PERFECT 'NO ACCIDENT' SCORE

(It is suggested the five striking cartoons be clipped and pasted on shop notice boards to stress safety week.)

By HUGH WEATHERBY
Press Counsel, B.C. Lumber Manufacturers' Association

SAFETY WEEK, May 14 to 19, will represent the combined efforts of the British Columbia Lumber Manufacturers' Association, the I.W. of A. and the Workmen's Compensation Board to complete five full working days without a compensable accident in any of the 78 mills in the British Columbia Lumber Manufacturers' Association.

TUESDAY, MAY 15.

B.C. LUMBER MANUFACTURERS' ASSN. IN COOPERATION WITH I.W. OF A. AND W.C.B. 3

The safety directors of the three organizations are firm believers in the fact that 95 per cent of all accidents are predictable and preventable and that with proper education can be eliminated. They point out that, back in 1924, the fatal accident rate amongst the member mills of the British Columbia Lumber Manufacturers' Association, employing about 4,000 workers, was one per month. By 1950, the rate had been reduced to one fatality amongst 16,000 workers per year. Last year the rate was reduced to 16 per cent below the previous year. This is attributable in a large degree to the fact that all three agencies concerned, that is the Workmens' Compensation Board, the I.W. of A., and the British Columbia Lumber Manufacturers' Association, have cooperated in their efforts to make the workmen more and more safety conscious, and to introduce every conceivable safety measure in the mills.

ACCIDENT TOLL CUT

While the association employs 60 per cent of the sawmill workers in the province, they had only one fatal accident out of the eight reported last year. In other words, the sawmills which do not make every effort to promote safety, employing about 40 per cent of the workers, had 87½ of the fatal accidents. It is axiomatic that every one loses in an accident and the average cost of an accident in the sawmill industry in 1949 was $335.12, while one single accident cost the industry $40,000. The industry of this province pays the entire monetary cost of the Workmens' Compensation Board, although the board administers the money.

But the whole cast is not borne by the industry. The workman suffers a great loss despite the fact that British Columbia's Workmens' Compensation laws are amongst the most generous in the world. Then, too, there is the pain and the impairment of future earning power to be considered. So the workman loses part of his earnings and suffers the pain of his injuries, and the company suffers a financial loss, but more important loses a valued and often highly skilled employee.

FIRST AID MAN

Every mill in the association employs a man with an Industrial First-Aid Ticket, which means that he has had at least 36 hours of intensive instruction of first-aid to the injured, and often his skill is responsible for saving a man's life and usually the results of the accident would be greatly increased if the first-aid man were not there to give immediate attention.

Gradually, the accident prevention program is having its affect and while in 1944, the accident frequency rate was 140 compensable accidents per million man hours worked, this year it will be about 45.

One of the things that impressed this writer was the cause of accidents. Of the 4,613 accidents which occurred in this province during 1950, 1,253 were the result of a man being stuck by some object—991 resulted 820 were the result of strains from slipping and falling, and and over-exertion. Equipment failure could be blamed for only 31. In other words, almost every accident occurred because of weakness in the human element and the safety directors assured me that 95 per cent of those accidents could, theoretically, be foreseen and prevented.

SAFETY EDUCATION

In addition to the safety education program which was going on continuously, the I.W. of A., the Workmen's Compensation Board, and the British Columbia Lumber Manufacturers' Association are on the constant alert for ways in which they can improve safety in the sawmills, and thus reduce the accident toll.

Today all dangerous areas are specially painted, men are encouraged to wear safety hats and safety shoes, and to keep the caulks in their boots in good shape. All hazardous areas are clearly indicated with signs, floors are kept clear of all foreign material. All vehicles are compelled to stop during changing of shifts and all moving machinery must be guarded where possible.

Within the last two years a sight-screening operation has been undertaken to ascertain whether a man's sight is good enough for the job he is doing. Where sight has been found defective, the men have been encouraged to buy glasses or have been transferred to jobs for which their eyesight was adequaquate.

HOPE FOR PERFECT SCORE

During safety week all mill personnel will be bombarded with circular letters, radio speeches, and personal speeches in the mills, in an effort to ascertain just how effective safety education can be made. The safety directors hope, and with some justification, to complete the entire five working days without a single compensable accident. Regardless of whether they have a perfect score at the end of a week, their previous record will almost certainly be bettered and Safety Week will be an indication of just what can be done in the way of educating sawmill accidents out of existence!

MERRIMAN TALKS

EAGER TO LEARN THEIR FIRST WORDS OF ENGLISH

Public-Spirited Ex-Y.M.C.A. Secretary Started Popular Language Classes

TWICE a week at the Y.M.C.A. representatives of 14 nationalities gather to learn their first halting words in English and with the increasing influx of displaced persons the classes are growing so big that the supply of teachers is becoming a problem.

HAROLD G. BEALL

Some of the pupils can not speak one word of English. They are graded as beginners. Some know a few words. They rate as intermediates. In the advanced class are those who have studied English in their homelands and wish to correct themselves in grammar, pronunciation and vocabulary.

To a public-spirited citizen, Harold G. Beall, retired Y.M.C.A. secretary, who started the classes and has now enrolled one or two willing instructors to help him, will go the thanks for launching them well in a new land of language learners from Poland, Germany, China, Holland, Denmark, Italy, Lithuania, Austria, Hungary, France, Switzerland, Ukraine and French Canada.

In previous years Sikhs, Hindus, Swedes, Belgians, Latvia and pupils from Dominican Republic have been included.

Modest, friendly, sincere, Mr. Beall, appears just the man to put at ease a timid class of foreign-speaking citizens feeling a little inferior because of lack of language of the land in which they have made their homes.

"You must be an accomplished linguist to teach so many languages, Mr. Beall."

"Not at all," he replied with an amused smile. "I don't know a word of the pupils' language. After all, you know, they are there to learn English, not to teach me their language."

It would seem a problem for a man not knowing a word of the language of a class of students to get on common ground.

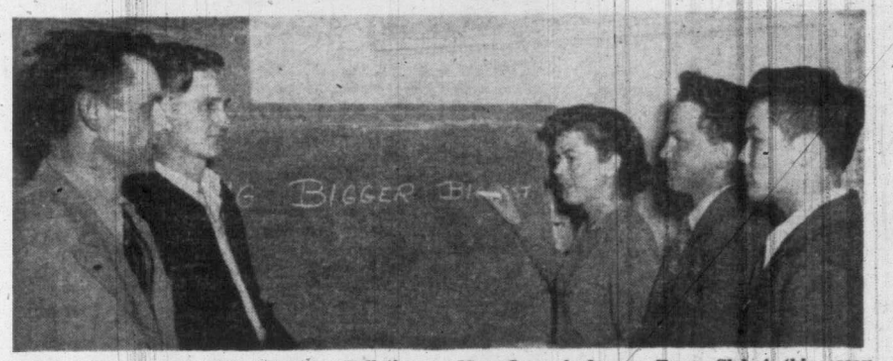
Mr. Beall, however, who had had experience in such a task in Montreal before he came to Victoria, finds it no trouble and has passed his system of first drilling home a few basic words of English by pictures and examples, after which the road becomes much smoother to his assistants.

The idea was born two years ago in the Y.M.C.A. in Victoria when three Chinese who had just come from Hong Kong and did not know a word of English wanted to speak the strange new language. Mr. Beall taught them.

Mr. Beall tells the rest of the story in his own words.

The news soon spread and quickly the class grew to include other nationalities. A newly arrived Dutch family of four, several Sikhs and Europeans joined the class, and by the time the course closed for the summer in May, 1942, there were enrolled 30 representatives of 12 nationalities.

In 1949-50 a new group enrolled and a few of the previous year returned to progress further. This year, 1950-51, the number has been larger than ever—54 representing 14 nationalities.



INTERMEDIATE CLASS—Maurice Pelletier, Quebec; Arthur Hoffman, Germany; Teacher Mrs. June Anderson, Taras Slabyj (his essay appears below); Tommy Lee, China.

In order to meet the differing needs of the pupils, who are mostly adults, both men and women, the students are graded into beginners, intermediates and advanced classes. The beginners are those who know not a word of English and must be taught by picture and action, as well as sound. They are also taught to read and write English and the use of correct grammer. The intermediates know some English but cannot speak freely nor read nor write much. The advanced are those who have studied English in their home lands and wish to perfect themselves in grammar, pronunciation and vocabulary.

In January this year, five new beginners, three Dutch and two Chinese, who had just come to Canada, applied for admission and in March still two others enrolled—a Parisian and an Italian. The original beginners' class was too far ahead for these newcomers, so two new classes were formed with Mrs. June Anderson as teacher.

The classes all meet on Tuesday and Friday nights from 7 to 10.30 for one hour each session. The text book used is "English for New Canadians," provided gratis by the Provincial Education Department — High School Correspondence Division; and "Basic Way to English," published in England.

MAKING HOMES HERE

Only one or two of the pupils had been in Canada for more than a year when he or she joined, most of them only a month or two. And they have all come to Canada to make new homes. A number were in concentration camps in Europe and the freedom of Canadian life is a revelation to them. They are all employed: farm work, railroad labor, lumber mills, factories, hospital helpers, domestics, construction jobs, offices, stores—and all are ambitious to become good citizens of Canada.

Several families have been in the classes: Of one family, the mother was in the beginners, the father in the intermediates, and the daughter in the advanced. One wife came to the beginners, then hurried home to relieve the husband who had been baby-sitting, to come to the intermediates. Another family of four joined—the father and younger daughter of 11 in the beginners and the son and older daughter in the intermediates. Two wives attended regularly until time for their babies to be born.

ROMANCE BLOSSOMED

And romance has blossomed—a young Ukrainian man and a pretty German girl sat opposite in one class! now they are happily married.

Of the five Polish young men now in the beginners, one has not missed a single session and another has been absent only twice (illness) in seven month.

As the influx of Europeans to Canada increases, the need for such classes as the Y.M.C.A. is sponsoring becomes greater and more teachers are required. A family of Germans has just come to Victoria to join their relatives who have been in the classes, and are asking for instruction.

As Mr. Beall and Mrs. Anderson will be out of town during the summer and autumn, volunteers to replace them will be welcomed by the Y.M.C.A. More Chinese also are expected to attend.

EASTER IN UKRAINE

Easter Holidays In Ukraine More Like Canadian Hallowe'en

(This interesting account of a Ukrainian Easter was written as a class test by a pupil who learned his English at the Y.M.C.A. language classes for foreigners launched by H. G. Beall.)

By TARAS SLABYJ

When the snow is gone and nature begins to show green the people in the Ukraine celebrate the Easter holidays.

The celebrating begins with Good Thursday. On this day the priest reads in church the 12 Evangels of Jesus Christ's life and death.

On Good Friday at noon the people celebrate with the priest the Crucifiction of Jesus Christ. At the end of the Crucifiction, which is held round the church, the priest puts the body of Jesus, that is represented by a picture, on one desk that represents the tomb.

From Good Friday till Sunday you can't hear the bells, just the wood-calling. By the tomb there are soldiers. They stand there till Sunday's Resurrection.

On Good Saturday you see the big preparation for Easter.

Sunday at 3 o'clock in the morning begins the Resurrection with nice songs. After Mass, all people go home to celebrate Easter another way (with 12 meals or more). In the afternoon all boys of the village ring the bells and play the spring-greeting (remaining from old times). The young men spring over the fire. The material they take from old fences of the neighbors.

On Easter Monday, in the morning, the boys pour water over the girls and wash them in this way. The girls run away and it is great fun.

On this day in the afternoon all the people of the village go to see their neighbors or their families.

On Easter Tuesday, the last day of Easter, you can hear also the dance music and songs of dancers and young people.

When Easter is over all the people are very sorry that these nice holidays are finished.

The Easter in the Ukraine is very mixed with tradition. And now Communists destroy this nice tradition with cruelty.

Black Market Creating Food Scandal For Spain

By HAYNES THOMPSON

MADRID, Spain (UP) — A crackdown on black marketeers has been started in a government effort to halt a mounting wave of resentment over high living costs.

Acting on cabinet orders, top police officials were reported weeding out graft suspects and double-checking food supply channels for irregularities.

The government action came after unrest over high living costs and low wages flared into violence in Barcelona. There were unruly student demonstrations in Madrid and crossed-arm work stoppages in three textile factories in the San Sebastian area.

The cost of living, according to the Spanish chamber of commerce, has risen about seven times over 1935 as against an increase in wages of only about 3½ times over 1935.

Basic food prices here do not appear excessively high to foreigners when calculated on the tourist exchange rate of 40 pesetas to the dollar.

At that rate, milk is 10 cents a quart, tomatoes 25 cents per two pounds and average fish 45 cents for two pounds.

It's another matter for Spaniards. A better than average wage earner here makes only 3,000 pesetas ($75) a month for a two-job 12-hour day.

If he has an average size family, most of his salary goes for food, the way prices are now.

Despite the usual increase in prices brought on by national and world inflation, many basic food items in Spain have remained costly and above all scarce to an extent unjustified by the nation's supply and demand.

One of the items is meat. A recent investigation into its supply and sale brought to light a scandal which still is rocking the nation. There have also been other food scandals.

Ordered personally by the Spanish chief of state, Generalissimo Francisco Franco, the meat investigation was begun early in March and is still going on.

The scandal involved the shipment of huge quantities of livestock and slaughtered meat across the Portuguese and French borders through illegal channels, thus creating a shortage in Spanish butcher shops.

Details of the investigation have been kept secret. Informed quarters said several hundred breeders and government officials, some in top posts, were involved.

With housewives still smarting from the meat scandal, they received another blow last week when Madrid's mayor, Jose Moreno Torres, calmly told a public meeting of the municipal council that 40 per cent of the capital's milk is "pure water at best."

That statement aroused the Falangist morning paper Arriba to say editorially:

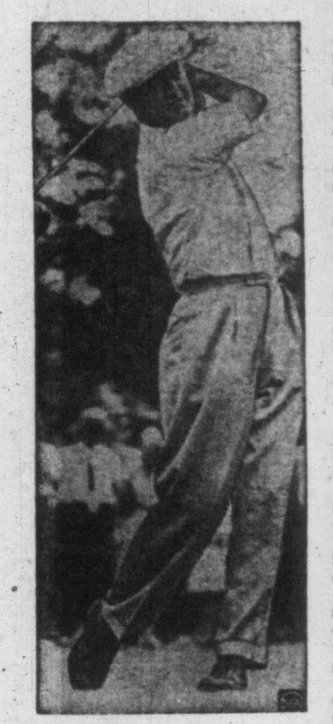
"Since how long, Mr. Mayor, has this been going on in the city, which you run and, consequently, how much longer is it going to go on?"

LEARN GOLF FROM THE STARS—No. 3

Right, Wrong Any Change Seems To Be Unnatural

By BYRON NELSON
Former U.S. Open Champion

Like many good golfers, I developed peculiarities in my game which suit the way I play, but might not prove most effective for others.



ALL TOGETHER—"The more you can start everything together, the easier it is to keep everything timed together throughout the swing," stresses Byron Nelson.—(NEA)

Of course, you know that we ourselves don't know actually how we play.

Whenever you make a change it seems unnatural, whether you change from right to wrong or wrong to right. That's why we get into arguments with persons teaching us.

We may be changing from a very bad grip to a perfect one, but until we become used to the grip it doesn't feel natural.

A lot of people say I sway. It has been argued pro and con. I don't know if I do.

I do know that the lower part of my body, from my hips down, sways when I start my swing.

When I stand at the ball, I have a decided amount of weight on my left foot. Not 90 per cent but more than a majority.

When I start the backswing, I can feel the weight transfer to my right foot, giving me the freedom I need for the lateral shift I have.

When I start back, my hips, hands, club and shoulders start at once.

The more you can start everything together, the easier it is to keep everything timed together throughout the swing.

If you start with the clubhead first, everything must follow the clubhead all the way around.

If your body and hands start first, you'll get a lash at the top of the swing.

As I told a roomful of experts at the P.G.A. convention in Chicago, one day that will work perfectly and the next it won't be so good.

It is essential that a person waggle the club in the same line that he expects to carry the club through during the entire swing.

NEXT: Jimmy Demaret says the professional's real pay-off is the grin of the duffer who suddenly hits the pin because he swung exactly as he was told.

CANASTA

Don't Starve Hand To Meld

By OSWALD JACOBY

Most experienced players know that it is very unwise to make an initial meld from the hand that uses up a substantial number of cards. You get caught without enough cards in your hand to fight for the discard pile.

For example, suppose you need 90 points for the first meld and that you draw from the stock and hold: A-Q-J 10-10-10 9-9-9 8-8-8.

You are able to reach the minimum by melding all the tens, nine, and eights. Then you would have to discard, after which you would have two odd cards left.

However, this would be a very poor meld to make. You would have practically no chance to get the discard pile, and you would need remarkable luck to meld out quickly.

Better policy with this hand is to keep the cards all in your hand and hope for a good break. Perhaps a ten, nine or eight will be discarded to you; and you will then get a discard pile. Perhaps your partner will be able to get the pile or to meld more economically from his hand.

The situation would be different, however, if you needed 50 points and held, after a draw from the stock, such a hand as:

A 7-7-7-7 6-6-6 4-4-4 2.

Your best play is to meld your sevens, sixes and fours. Then you discard the ace, save the deuce in your hand, and wait for developments.

The chances are very good that your partner can add enough to one of your melds so that you will be able to make a canasta and meld out at your next turn—or perhaps the turn after that.

The big argument in favor of melding at once is that you have practically no chance to do yourself much good if you hold up. Even if you get the discard pile you won't be able to make a big hand. There are too many high cards and wild cards available to the opponents, so that they will be able to stop your parade before it even gets started.

So Much Kissing Makes Her Blush

Twenty-nine-year-old Nancy Chan, star of Chinese films, is in England looking round studios, but may never act there. "In English and American studios there is so much kissing," she said, blushing as she mentioned the word. "In our films we are more delicate. We show our love by rubbing cheeks, a handclasp or by linking arms."

STAMPS

By R. NAIRNE

Special Purpose Issue Just 100 Years Old

JUST 100 years ago last January Austria issued the world's first special-purpose stamp. This was a blue adhesive expressly designed to prepay postage on one newspaper, regardless of weight. Two similar stamps followed—a yellow one for postage on 10 papers, and a rose-red, which carried 50. They were unusual in that they had no expressed denomination, their value being determined by their colors only.

Stolow's International Stamp News, N.Y., gives some interesting information regarding these issues, which are rarities today.

They were simple in design, showing the classical head of Mercury within a square frame, with the words, "K. K. Zeitungs Post Stampel" ("Imperial Newspaper Post Stamp") around the borders; and they were issued unperforated. They were available only to newspaper publishers in full sheets of 100. The blue ones cost 60 kreutzers (50c) per sheet, and the others were proportionately dearer. In fact, the rose-red stamps proved too expensive, so were demonitized a year later and afterwards sold at the same price as the blue stamps, being then, of course, only good for postage on one newspaper.

In 1856 the yellow variety was also demonitized and withdrawn when it was found that it was being forged by taking the cheap blue stamps and turning them yellow by means of chemicals. So a distinctive scarlet stamp was issued to take its place.

Owing to their peculiar usage very few of these stamps have survived, for they were stuck on wrappers containing bundles of newspapers, which on arrival were naturally ripped off and destroyed. (There were few, if any, stamp collectors to come to their rescue 100 years ago!)

So in spite of the fact that 720,000 of the yellow, and 240,000 of the rose-red varieties were issued, only a few dozen have come down to collectors today. The scarlet stamp is not only the scarcest of the lot but is one of the rarest stamps in the world, for of these only seven used and 15 unused specimens are now in existence. Yet there were originally 120,000 copies printed. Most of the survivors of all these stamps are in poor condition.

The original price of the 22 scarlet Mercuries now in existence was about $1. One hundred years later we find them catalogued in excess of $50,000. Likewise, another dollar bill would have sufficed, back in 1856, to have bought all the 70 remaining specimens of the other two varieties. Today they list at over $120,000! Many forgeries exist.

Canada Note—The latest stamp to go off sale at Ottawa is the 1c "O.H.M.S." of the war issue type.

Outlaw Taught Sunday School

FULTON, Mo (UP)—As long as there's a Missouri, there will be new Jesse James stories. The latest, found in the Mexico (Mo.) Evening Ledger of Oct. 11, 1910, brought to light the fact that the outlaw once taught Bible classes.

James served the old Unity Church as Sunday school superintendent for a month and taught classes of little children in the open air. He was known as 'Brother Johnson."

Jesse's Sunday school days ended abruptly when he learned of plans to capture him at a Sunday school picnic at Wommack. One of his friends tipped him off, the Ledger piece said, and he fled.

Colorful Play Of Expert Worth Study

By OSWALD JACOBY

WHEN pressure of business forced Walter Malowan to withdraw from tournament play a few years ago, the sport lost one of its most colorful competitors.

In his heyday Walter was famous for the tight spots that he would get himself into—and for the way he would manage to wriggle out of them.

My favorite Malowan hand, shown today, gives a good picture of his coolness under fire.

Malowan held the West cards and had to defend against the diamond slam that had been bid by Waldemar von Zedtwitz and the late great P. Hal Sims. Look it over and see what you think is your chance to beat six diamonds.

Sims, who was playing the hand as declarer, ruffed the opening heart lead in dummy. There were tricks to burn, he saw, if he could only draw trumps and keep the hearts from winning tricks.

He led the 10 of diamonds from dummy and let it ride for a finesse. Malowan dropped the seven of diamonds without the flicker of an eyelash.

Sims studied the hand intently and wondered if East had the rest of the diamonds. It looked that way from Malowan's play and from his earlier heart overcall.

So Sims led dummy's remaining trump and finessed the jack from his hand. Thereupon, Malowan produced the queen of diamonds and two heart tricks.

CRIME STORIES OF B.C.—No. 9

THE CASE OF SMILING JOHNNY REID, THE INVENTOR

By CECIL CLARK

HAD you been standing near the Nelson Street entrance to Vancouver's Stanley Park, one drizzly morning in the spring of 1924, you might have seen a stockily built middle aged man deep in conversation with a younger companion. As they studied the park entrance, the younger man's face lit up with an infectious broad grin from time to time.

The older of the duo was Asst. Supt. Walter Owen of the B.C. Police. His companion was "Smiling Johny" Reid, who had made a career of holding up banks.

Just inside the park, Owen produced a slender pointed steel rod and probing here and there in the ground at Reid's direction he found what he was looking for.

A cache, in a four pound jam tin, of about $84,000 worth of stolen bonds.

How they got in the park flower bed is another story. A story that goes back two years before to the morning of March 28, 1922 and the little town of Ladner in the Fraser delta.

$130,000 BONDS MISSING

When the manager of the Royal Bank came down to his office that morning he found a gaping hole in the brick wall, and $130,000 in bonds missing.

There were at first no clues to the Ladner job. But it was conceded to be the work of experts, who had worked away quietly during the night time, with the town's communication cut.

MISTAKEN FOR RUM RUNNERS

A couple of roughly clad strangers had been seen around town the week before. Most people took them for rum runners. They couldn't be identified as any of the known criminals.

But a lead came a month later when some of the Ladner bonds turned up in the Canadian Bank of Commerce at Fernie. Asst. Supt. Walter Owen, veteran of 25 years with the B.C. force, and who had been put in charge of the Ladner case, sped to the Kootenay coal town.

The bonds he discovered had been deposited by a local man, who got them in turn in Havre, Montana in a car deal. At Havre, Owen searched for the car salesman, but he had vanished.

He did find though that some of the bonds had turned up in the Security State Bank at Havre. But try as he might he got no clue where they originated. For the next five months investigators quizzed and probed with little result.

It was around the end of August that the scene took a sharp switch to the prairies, where five masked men had walked into the Union Bank at Moremost, Alberta and scooped up $123,000 in bonds and $20,000 in cash.

Alberta's crack provincial police force, led by Col. W. C. Bryan was on the job, but like their confreres in B.C., they found their pace soon slowed by lack of identification.

A year went by without a break in either the Ladner or the Foremost job.

WANTED TO TALK

It was Insp. E. W. Bavin of the A. P. P. who broke the lull.

A friendly attorney in Bozeman, Montana called him one day to say that he had a client who wanted to talk about bank robberies, Canadian bank robberies.

The informant behind bars was "Daddy" Marshall. Once a political power in the State and friend of the underworld, now he was down and out, and in jail. He was going to help himself out of jail by talking.

The Foremost job, said Marshall, was the work of Smiling Johnny Reid, Sid the Duke, Joe Hogan and Joe Brown. And important from a B.C. point of view was the information that Reid, The Duke and Whitey Cline had pulled a bank job near Vancouver in the spring of 1922.

IN JAIL IN MONTANA

Word was flashed to the coast, and Walter Owen arrived in Edmonton to team up with the Alberta police.

It didn't take them long to find Johnny Reid. He was in jail in Montana. And while arrangements were being made to extradite him back to Canada, Owen headed east on the trail of Cline and Joe Hogan.

For Marshall had said they might be around Minneapolis. Asst. Supt. Nicholson of the Alberta police joined Owen in the Twin City, but here the investigators soon found a set-up they couldn't beat.

The cities of Minneapolis and St. Paul had at that time a peculiar law enforcement arrangement. At least Minneapolis did.

A criminal could stay unmolested in Mineapolis if he didn't pull a job within the city limits. So he did his law breaking in St. Paul or elsewhere and rested up in Minneapolis. And naturally the detective bureau in Minneapolis had a hazy memory for criminal names and faces in their city.

The two Canadians could get nowhere, so they returned to Montana to concentrate on Johnny Reid.

By this time Reid's attorney said his client was willing to talk, and the upshot was that Owen and Nicholson headed out with Reid one dark night in a sheriff's car, headed for Great Falls. At daylight, just off the highway, Reid told them to pull in to the side of the road. A few hundred yards away in the bush, closely watched by the two Canadian police officers, Smiling Johnny dug down with pick and shovel until he came to a sodden kit bag. In it was $100,000 of the Foremost loot.

A few days later Supt. Owen and his prisoner arrived in Vancouver, and Johnny Reid uncovered the bonds in Stanley Park.

Smiling Johnny Reid pleaded guilty in Edmonton to his share of the Foremost job and got a suspended sentence for his help to the police. In Vancouver a week later, when he said "Guilty" to Judge Cayley, he got a similar technical penalty.

Altogether he helped the police locate nearly a million dollars worth of loot from Canadian and American banks. He told Walter Owen that he wanted to clean the slate and go straight. Johnny, who had opened many a lock in his day, had, believe it or not, invented an unpickable lock. Released from the toils, he got it patented, and when last heard of many years ago he was making an honest come-back in the States.

Walter Owen hung doggedly to the trail of Whitey Cline, and months later found his man at Rugby, North Dakota held on a burglary charge. But Whitey had no stomach for a Canadian judge and jury; he promptly pleaded guilty to the U.S. charge and got fifteen years.

Last of the trio, Sid the Duke was shot a few months later in a bank hold-up in North Dakota.

In popular Stanley Park a fortune in bonds was buried.—(B.C. Travel Bureau Picture)

Firm Guards Myriads Of Jewels, Ropes Of Pearls

MONTREAL (CP)—A throne worth $30,000,000, ropes of pearls six feet long and chests overflowing with jewels are not very startling to Hon. George Charles Hayter Chubb of London.

They aren't his, of course, but Chubb's firm, a lock and safe company, has the job of guarding them among other almost priceless treasures of the world's monarchs.

The throne is the fabulous Peacock Throne of Persia and it is in a burglar-proof room designed by Mr. Chubb's company.

"The floor is literally strewn with expensive baubles, such as gold swords," he said during a recent visit here. "Chests are scattered about, spilling precious stones. There is even a globe of the world two feet in diameter, made of solid gold."

Guarding such treasure is an old story in the Chubb family. When his great-great-grandfather won a $500 prize for designing a good lock, King George III was so taken with it he sent all the royal business to him. Since then business has snowballed.

Right now Mr. Chubb is concerned with the British crown jewels to be displayed at the Festival of Britain. The family guarded the valuables at the 1851 festival, among them the Koh-I-Noor diamond.

MANY SAFEGUARDS

To guard the magnificent diamond, Chubb's built a gigantic "parrot cage" around the gem. At night, when the display is closed, a spring was touched and the diamond sank into a massive iron Box which in turn disappeared into a pedestal of solid masonry.

Chubb's will be doing a similar job with the British crown jewels during the Festival of Britain this year.

The most unusual job the firm had to tackle was an order from an Indian maharajah for strong boxes for the jewelry of his 17 wives. Chubb's made the boxes, each with an individual lock and key. The women were delighted with this bit of privacy but they under-rated the ingenuity of the maharajah and Chubb's. The maharajah had a master key fitting all 17 boxes.

BRITAIN WELCOMES FESTIVAL VISITORS

BRITAIN today and Britain of the past will be of absorbing interest for millions of visitors from overseas who will visit the Old Land during the Festival of Britain, which opened this month.

The new turn in Britain's affairs following the heroic years of 1940-50 will be stressed by manufacturers in displays pointing her return to and advances in the industrial field.

For millions, however, the old world scenes of the English countryside, little changed with the passing of the years, ancient churches, cathedrals and historical monuments will hold first place in their interest.

Victoria Daily Times

VICTORIA, B.C., SATURDAY, MAY 12, 1951

on the TIMES

By ART STOTT

Thousands of people have tried James Joyce's book Finnegan's Wake. It's the kind of thing you try. You don't read it. Probably not more than a few dozen who have picked it up have read it through, and you could probably count on the fingers of your hands those who pretend to understand it. The other thousands have tried it, like you try a strange and incredible dish, tasting a spoonful and then setting it aside as too indigestible.

But if you sometimes want to pose as an intellectual, and if you're as phony as me in that role, there's a simple approach to Finnegan. You borrow the book from the library for a couple of weeks. You dip into a page or two, find it completely incomprehensible, and then lay it aside. You should keep it a couple of weeks, to give the impression you went through it. Then, when you take it back, you say to the librarian: "I've never seen such a remarkable work."

Stott

TO DECIPHER some cryptic implication from it, you start reading the literature which has been written on Finnegan. It's a cult and some of it's almost understandable.

When you get together with other phony intellectuals, you can create a terrific impression if you remember some of the passages, not of the book, but of the literature. You can suggest to an acquaintance who may honestly admit ignorance, that the proper attack on Finnegan is to read him aloud. It's the sound that has significance, you explain. That way you can get the puns. You can't, of course. They're too obscure. But you may remember the one about the young girls being Freudened to death. Quote that, and a couple more, and you've established yourself.

THEN JUST GET back to sound. You can develop quite a case on the significance of sound. It has meaning. It has mood undertones.

You can pick out a line on the river Liffey and show how the sound indicates the burbling course of water running down stream. It might also indicate the sound of a carton of empty beer bottles rattling downstairs, but ignore that among the intellectuals.

You can make capital out of onomatopoeia—that two-bit word in any high school English class. There's lots of it in Finnegan. Joyce threw just about everything he could find into the book, and he found a lot. That's what makes it hard for the average guy to chew. It's like eating a slice of birthday cake and biting into the nickel hidden in it. Finnegan breaks off your mental baby teeth, too.

A YOUNG COLUMBIA University graduate who was out here a few years ago, told me one of his professors decided to give a course on the book. He started by selecting students.

Each one had to be an expert in some particular field. One was a Dubliner, with local knowledge. One was a classical scholar, another a musician. One was a student of words with a fair range of slang, still another a student of philosophy, and so on. The class read Finnegan, sentence by sentence. Each member would figure out, from his own specialist's point of view, what the sentence meant, the allusions in it. After a year's study, they figured they had a fair idea of what had gone into the dream story within a dream story, within a dream story.

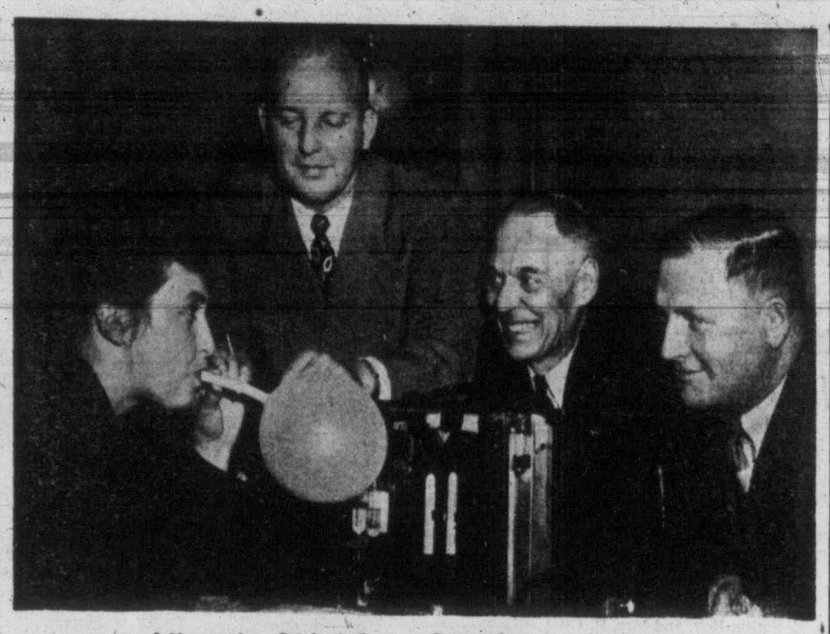
Nathan Halper, has written another magazine article on Finnegan to add to the collection he wrote before on Joyce's book. He says that every phrase in Finnegan "is a breach through which the whole universe streams." He also explains that you must understand the patterns in the work before you can appreciate it, and the patterns are the subject of another book Halper is now completing.

FINNEGAN'S WAKE isn't a new book. It is dated 1939. But it will never wear out as a discussion topic. Every now and then, somebody reads it and writes about it and some unsuspecting people pick it up again, are impressed by its unusual form and walk away with a funny look in their eye, muttering unintelligibly.

The Encyclopoedia Britannica explains: "While the permutations of dream and myth give unity to all human experience, and sound and rhythm are employed with extraordinary success, Joyce's word-technique, endlessly blending meaning with meaning, and allusion with allusion, not only in English but in other languages, leaves the reader floundering in a welter of possible interpretations."

In the vernacular, it sends you—right down to the corner store for another 26-cent western. Those western writers do quaint things with English, too. But it ain't so hard t' foller trail in 'em.

Read any good westerns lately?



Victoria Chief Sees Drunkometer Tests

Victoria Police Chief John Blackstock was in Vancouver Friday to witness demonstration of apparatus used to test drunken drivers. Mrs. Simma Holt breathes into balloon for breath test. Seattle police captain Charlie Rouse, left, demonstrates drunkometer for Vancouver police traffic superintendent H. Higginbottom and Chief Blackstock.

Victoria Police Chief Scrutinizes 'Drunkometer' For Possible Use Here

The possibility loomed today that the "drunkometer," widely used in the United States, may eventually be used by Victoria and Vancouver police to help in the task of determining intoxication of motorists.

On his return here Friday from a visit to Vancouver where he attended a "drunkometer" demonstration, Victoria Chief of Police John Blackstock admitted he was impressed with the machine.

He will make a report to the police commission soon.

USE BALLOON

The apparatus consists of a balloon, chemicals and glass tube. A person being tested blows into a balloon and the breath is then released through the chemicals, which change color with varying amounts of alcohol on the breath.

"The machine is by no means the sole judge," said Chief Blackstock, who noted other factors are involved in determining drunkenness.

At present, the old system is being used here. If a policeman thinks a person has been drinking too much while in control of make a test. If the physician's test indicates liquor has affected the driving ability of the person, a drunken driving charge is laid.

Dr. E. L. McNiven is usually called by all police forces other than the city. He has resigned from that city service. City police have other doctors they can call to make the tests.

Chief Blackstock said a committee was formed to look into all aspects of introducing the machine in British Columbia. Before it can be used the courts must accept it as evidence.

There was considerable opposition to the "drunkometer" for a long while in the United States at the outset, but the objections have since now been cleared away.

Herbert Ford was remanded to Tuesday for sentence when he pleaded guilty to a charge of assaulting Mrs. William Izard.

SAILING SEASON ON

Royal Victoria Yacht Club Holds Sail-Past

Royal Victoria Yacht Club this afternoon launched its 1951 summer sailing season, heaviest in the club's long history.

The occasion was marked by formal sail-past of all units in the club fleet before Commodore H. A. Wallace, who took the salute aboard his flagship, Buccaneer II, at 3:15.

Honorary Commodore A. D. Crease led the parade, followed by Vice-Commodore E. N. Lierch and Rear-Commodore Maj.-Gen. C. R. Stein.

Fleet Captain H. J. Barnes led the sailing fleet and Staff Captain J. E. Mathews led the powerboat squadron.

Vessels sailed in line astern past the flagship. Skippers dipped their ensigns in salute.

At the conclusion of the sail-past club members were guests of the commodore at a reeception in the clubhouse.

Strike Ballot Delay Forecast

Delay in the counting of strike votes by unlicensed seamen aboard coastal vessels of the Canadian Pacific, Canadian National and Union Steamship companies was seen today when it was learned seamen aboard the C.P.R.'s Yukon Princess have yet to receive their ballot slips.

The Yukon Princess is now southbound from Alaska and is scheduled to arrive in Vancouver in the middle of next week. Her seamen will vote then, and their ballots will be put in with other slips before the vote is counted.

Meanwhile, negotiations between representatives of the three companies concerned and officials of the Seafarers' International Union continue in a move to avert the walkout threat.

NAVY TO MARK 'BATTLE OF ATLANTIC DAY'

Plans were under way here today for observance by the Navy Sunday, May 20, as "Battle of the Atlantic" day to commemorate the part played by the R.C.N. and Canada's merchant navy in World War II.

Announcement of the special ceremonies was made in Ottawa by Defence Minister Brooke Claxton.

Church parades will be held here and in other localities with naval bases and training establishments, and special services will be conducted on board ships at sea.

Police Puzzled

Greater Victoria police today were still at a loss to explain two mystery blasts that shook houses in the Marigold-Colquitz area late Friday night.

First blast came at 11.10 and the second at 12.10. Saanich and R.C.M.P. searched the area early this morning without results.

Constable Joseph Armstrong of the Saanich police said there were conflicting reports on the direction of the explosions.

Recommends Parking Fines Be Doubled

A dollar increase for parking meter infractions and a half-hour cut in downtown area one-hour parking limit are being considered by the city's transportation committee, which met Friday. Sgt. Brooke Douglass made the recommendations.

Motorists now pay $1 for meter infractions.

A change in the type of parking meter now in use in Victoria was suggested by Ald. Percy Scurrah, who felt they were not efficient enough. Parking limit times could be indicated by different colors at the curbs, Ald. Waldo Skillings suggested.

B.C. Forest Fires

There have been 182 more forest fires in B.C. this year than in the corresponding period of 1950, it was learned today from officials of the B.C. Forest Service.

The dry weather this year has resulted in the outbreak of 215 fires which have cost $15,059 to fight. At this time last year there had been only 33 fires and the cost was $299.

Power Commission Purchases Plant

Government Authorizes $1,181,250 Expenditure For Island Facilities

B.C. Power Commission today was authorized by the government to buy the Puntledge power plant of Canadian Collieries (Dunsmuir) Ltd. and the Wellington Collieries Co. Ltd. near Union Bay in the Courtenay-Cumberland district for $1,181,250.

Announcement of the authorization was made by Premier Byron Johnson who said plan was to develop the plant at a later date as ancilliary to the supply of power from the John Hart plant at Campbeell River.

Purchase involves the plant, site, and certain electrical distribution facilities owned by the collieries.

Mr. Johnson said preliminary engineering work for the development of the plant has been completed already.

It is intended to improve the plant to a point where it will be capable of providing 23,000 continuous electrical horsepower.

Under provisions of the Electric Power Act, the government power commission will supply the collieries with required power after the purchase.

Stage Drivers Vote Monday On Strike Action

Bus drivers employed by Veteran Stages Ltd., will ballot Monday on the question of strike action.

Officials of the Labor Relations' Board confirmed today that Local 109, of the Amalgamated Association of Street, Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employees of America, bargaining authority for the six Veteran stage drivers, had made formal application for a supervised vote after a new negotiation breakdown Friday.

Management and union authorities were unable to come to any compromise in their long, drawn-out wage dispute after it was learned Friday afternoon that a short-term agreement, proposed by the company as a means of staving off strike action, was found to be contrary to the I.C.A. Act.

The two parties are at odds over wages and a union request that the company share the cost of maintaining medical and hospital insurance coverage.

B.C. Farmers Cheer May Rainy Spell

B.C. farmers today had nothing but words of cheer for rains in most sections of the province the last few days, a provincial survey today showed.

Government agriculture officials said most branches of the industry were sorely in need of the "million dollar rain," following many weeks of drought.

Vancouver Island and the lower mainland—the Fraser Valley—were the two areas in greatest need, apparently, with seeding under way. Pastures in the interior were beginning to be parched too, and sections of the Okanagan where there are no irrigation systems were in need of relief.

Government horticulturists said the rains have caused no damage to any crops. "It's done nothing but good," they reported.

Cigarets Stolen

A thief got $20 in cash and four cartons of cigarets from Duffy's Cafe, 721 View Street, early today. Police said the cafe was still open when the thief entered the kitchen by the rear alley door and stole the money and cigarets from a locker containing the property of Mrs. M. Scott, proprietress.

Oak Bay Expenditures

Oak Bay municipality has been authorized by the government to spend $9,700 surplus and tax sale funds as follows:

Rows of flower baskets "toughen up" at park nursery.

Famed Hanging Baskets Make Appearance June 9

Victoria's famed hanging flower baskets are in the process of being "toughened up" before they make their official appearance on the mainstem, June 9, according to Parks Administrator Herb Warren today.

This year, as last, 550 baskets will grace Government, Douglas, Belleville, Humboldt, Broad and Yates.

All indications point to a top-grade display with tagetes and trailing nepeta again in the baskets, after being dropped for one year.

"We find they add to the general show," said Mr. Warren.

Included in each basket are geraniums, fuchsia, petunia, lobelia, schizanthus, coreopsis and viscaria. Nurserymen began growing plants for the baskets in December, in soil that has already been especially prepared.

The baskets are made up in April and get a start in the greenhouse. Once frost is no longer a threat they are put outside to "toughen up."

Council this year has authorized watering of the baskets every night except Sunday. In years past watering has been done every second night.

The extra watering is expected to keep the baskets at the peak of attractive display throughout the summer months.

Trail-Castlegar Road Work Planned

Public works officials today promised quick repairs to the Trail-Castlegar highway following a threat by a Kootenay transportation company that it would take its buses off the road unless potholes were filled.

The Castlegar Transport Co-operative complained to Works Minister E. C. Carson the road was in deplorable state and said it could not continue service.

A spokesman from the minister's office said it was intended to surface section of the highway this year, and maintenance might have been allowed to lag because of this fact.

Fisherman Admits 'Tricking' Buyers

Detective Angus Munro interviewed a commercial fisherman Friday afternoon who had tricked J. H. Todd Sons, Wharf Street, out of $410 by falsifying the weight slips on fish he had sold the firm. The man admitted the trick and turned over the money to the accountant. The firm was satisfied with getting the money back and will not press charges, Detective Munro said.

Former Victorian Hilda Hutchison To Make New Home On The Mainland

Fragrant white lilacs and tulips formed the setting for the bride in her wedding gown of white starched lace with nylon yoke, in off-shoulder effect, lily point sleeves and floor-touching skirt. A tiara of pearls held her long veil of silk net. Her only jewelry was an exquisite gold cross and chain belonging to her mother. A cascade bouquet of red roses and lily of the valley completed her all-white ensemble. Mr. Hutchison gave his daughter in marriage.

Duo bridal attendants, Miss Anne Rothwell, and Miss Barbara Hill, cousin of the bride, were in gowns of sheerest green nylon, and shell pink taffeta, respectively. Peggy Dupuis Lives In Dream House With Swim Pool In Middle Of Ocean—Wouldn't Trade Surf For Caviar

By DAWN VAN NORMAN

"A little emerald in the middle of the sea," is the way Peggy Dupuis described her home at Egg Island Lighthouse Station in the middle of Queen Charlotte Sound.

Mrs. Dupuis has been a guest at the Empress Hotel for the past few days recuperating from an emergency operation which was performed when she was brought to Vancouver five weeks ago by R.C.A.F. Air-Sea Rescue.

Two years ago Peggy and her husband, Lawrence, a former tug boat mate, went to occupy and operate the rebuilt lighthouse station on Egg Island which was swept into the sea during a storm in 1948.

Peggy explained she had not been spared the ordeal of battling such storms.

A BUSY LIFE

"On the 20th of January this year we were hit by a terrific hurricane. It didn't cause any serious damage but minor repairs surely kept us busy for awhile."

She also talked about the foggy season when they are surrounded by thick fog for eight to 10 days at a time.

"Our work, comprised of operating the lighthouse, the fog horn and a weather station with reports to the Government three times a day is at a peak then as you can well imagine," she said.

She also spoke of the strong currents and said, "On calm days the waves are 20 to 30 feet high and during a storm they leap to 200 feet."

Some would consider this a terrifying life, but for Peggy it is "the only one."

In speaking of her home she said, "It really is a paradoxical situation for there, in the middle of nowhere, with the surf pounding all around me, is my dream house. It is two stories high and has six rooms built beneath the lighthouse tower. I can even boast of hardwood floors, electric lights, even in my cupboards, and a Pembroke bath.

CITY COMFORTS

"One thing I never dreamt I would have was a swimming pool. Much less did I ever imagine that I would succeed in having my own private pool in the middle of the ocean. Well, that is exactly what has happened, for from the foundation of the old lighthouse that was swept into the sea we have modeled a 34 by 38 foot pool."

In talking about the boat that brings supplies and a very rare visitor, Mrs. Dupuis said, "It is a replica of a Newbedford whaler, the type of boat that is best suited to battle the surf."

Mrs. Dupuis was very frank in saying they had very few visitors. She further justified this statement when she told of the "major operation" entailed in landing on Egg Island which gets its name from its shape.

"If you are quick on the hop-skip-and-jump you may make it," she said with a twinkle in her large dark eyes.

She went on to explain, "We have a very swift and powerful current and constant high waves surrounding the island. To land you ride in the tender as close to shore as you dare, then with the insurge of the waves you take one mighty deep breath and leap to shore."

Mrs. Dupuis added with a laugh, "If you miss you get a very good bath and furthermore you may never live to tell the tale."

Heavy supplies and equipment are brought to shore by means of a power line which is operated from lighthouse level, Mrs. Dupuis said.

Her lighthouse home, first built in 1898, badly damaged the two succeeding years, battered by many storms and swept into the sea in 1948.

During bad weather, which knows no season, boats often have to lie to for three or four days before they can even approach the island to make a landing, but around the middle of June when the fishing season is at its peak it is surrounded by any number of fishing boats; they set out their nets quite near the island.

In a word picture, Mrs. Dupuis explained the island was divided in two, the lighthouse is built on a knoll and the remainder of the one-eighth by one-sixth-mile island is joined by a bridge.

The couple have a successful garden on this part and harvest a splendid supply of vegetables.

Next part of the story as told by Peggy Dupuis sounds like a Walt Disney fantasy. "We have a Siamese cat which we call 'Bassy'," she said, "and a rabbit known as 'Thumper.' These two are constant companions and recently they added to the population of the island by having a family."

Peggy Dupuis lands on Egg Island from tender that approaches through the only navigable channel.

"Their other friends are 'Oscar,' a seal, and 'Comrade Owl,' a white breed from Siberia."

"Every few days Oscar lands on the rocks, lets out a hearty bark and Bassy and Thumper romp down to meet him with Comrade Owl circling over their heads."

She added, "Don't let anyone ever tell you that a lighthouse keeper's life is a dull one."

MANY HOBBIES

Loneliness? Mrs. Dupuis doesn't even know what the word means.

Besides all her other duties as wife of a lighthouse keeper she is an ardent ham radio fan known to that world as VE 7 ABF, a keen photographer and she does all her own printing and developing.

She also is a taxidermist!

"Some time ago I caught an octopus and decided it might be fun to preserve it," she said. "This was quite a mistake as it almost smelt us out of house and home. Apparently I didn't use the right acid at the right time.

"After this experience I sent for a correspondence course in taxidermy so I'd be able to stuff and preserve some of the odd life that visits our Island from time to time."

"Puffins, a rare and little known sea bird, have started to nest on the Island and I plan to stuff these and other rare creatures and send them to Dr Carl here."

All this does not seem to run Peggy short of time for writing. Her accomplishments in this field are not surprising as she is the daughter of one of Univerity of British Columbia's first women professors, Bertha Maude Hunt, later Mrs. C. F. Maucaulay, and a descendant of the famous historian, Thomas Babbington Macaulay.

A contributor for years to papers and magazines, she has just had a book published on local impressions of Egg Island and Bassy and her friends.

Reminiscing about her hurried and unexpected trip off the Island for the first time in 21 months Mrs. Dupuis said, "Immediately I was taken ill I radioed Prince Rupert and a Canso was sent to the scene right away. Weather conditions were very bad at the time and it was impossible to land."

Finally by way of tender and Dakota she arrived in Vancouver. Peggy had sent the first alarm at four in the afternoon and arrived there at seven the next evening.

Mrs. Dupuis left Victoria today for Vancouver where she will board the Union steamship for Namu, on the other side of Queen Charlotte Sound. From there she will board a tender for Egg Island.

Her face lit up and her eyes sparkled as she concluded, "Now I can hardly wait to get home again!"

Two Coasts Share Interest In Wedding

Pacific and Atlantic coasts shared interest in the marriage of Miss Phyllis Hartill Lock, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Lock, Sooke Road, and James Lorne Doyle, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Doyle, Charlottetown, P.E.I., last evening in St. John's Church, Colwood. Rev. H. J. Jones officiated.

Organist was J. Flatman.

The bride wore a charming two-piece gown of Elenore blue velvet with small matching hat. Her corsage bouquet was gardenias and lily of the valley.

Mrs. Doyle was given in marriage by her father.

Her sister, Miss Audrey Lock, was her only attendant and Melvin Doyle, uncle of the groom, was best man.

Spring flowers decorated the home of the bride's parents for the wedding reception following the ceremony. F. J. Willway proposed the toast to the bride.

The newlyweds will make their home in Victoria following a honeymoon motoring through the Northwest States.

BETWEEN OURSELVES

Mother's Day Is A Symbol Of Many Happy Moments

By ELIZABETH FORBES

It's a symbol of all things a mother means to her children.

It's a day when every grown-up man and woman every younger boy and girl, pauses for a moment to honor—Mother! A day in which parental ties are strengthened by the intangible bonds of love!

It's a day of remembering! How Mother made you eat every bit of your cereal and every crumb of toast before she would let you go out to play. How morning after morning, she started you off to school on time and even had a minute to wave good-bye.

The snacks she had ready when you came home from school.

How she helped you with your lessons and when things went wrong how she was always ready with comfort and good advice.

Remembering, too, the days you had to bring in the wood, cut the lawn . . . or go to the grocery store to help carry home the provisions.

Sometimes you didn't like doing the chores or carrying parcels, but, being a wise Mother, she knew that early training in doing things for others was essential if you were to be a good citizen when you grew up!

Remembering how she tucked you into bed at night . . . read you a story and listened to you say your prayers.

And when she turned out the light you knew she was close at hand . . . only in the next room . . . and if you called she would be right there.

These and many other memories keep Mother's Day something very special on the year's calendar.

* * *

But one day, while a happy symbol, is not long enough to honor a mother.

Every hour of every day in the year should be devoted to remembering that a good mother is the finest gift any man, woman or child will ever receive!

A home in Aberdeen, Wash., is the future plan of last evening's bridal pair, Mr. and Mrs. James George Forrest McKellar, who were married in flower-filled St. Mary's Church, Oak Bay.

Bride's attendant, Miss Char[illegible] Anne Geddes, who came from New Westminster for the occasion, chose a gabardine suit of palest blue with lilac pink accessories. Her bouquet was of deep pink roses.

Hildegarde Wyllie, New Head Of Victoria Art Centre, Would Interest Victorians In Gallery

By ELIZABETH FORBES

Take a sunny afternoon in May, a garden where Japanese maples, flowering cherries and dogwood blossoms are reflected in the shimmering mirrors of still rock pools, a home with alcoved windows facing west across a meadowed valley to a horizon etched with the outline of the snow-capped Olympics.

And a living room, white paneled, with dark stone hearth, furnished with many lovely old pieces of furniture that give one the impression of being there not only to admire but to use.

Put them all together and you have a breath-takingly lovely—and definitely appropriate—setting for an artist.

And it is an artist who lives at Omeishan (Chinese word for sacred mountain) on the West Saanich Road.

ENTHUSIASTIC

An artist who not only tells you she paints because she loves it, but also that she does not want to talk about herself. Only about the project nearest and dearest to her heart—Victoria's Art Centre.

She is Mrs. A. S. Wyllie, recently named president of that art centre, and enthusiastically determined to find some way while she is in office, of increasing interest in art among the people of Victoria, and bringing them a few steps nearer to having a real art gallery.

"The need for a gallery is a very real one," she tells you.

"You've no idea how many visitors ask for Victoria's art gallery and how surprised they are when they discover that this capital city of British Columbia merely functions in a small centre and on voluntary help.

A GREAT NEED

"We need a gallery too, in order to instill an appreciation of painting in our own citizens," she confined.

"But if this is to be accomplished we must first rouse their curiosity. They must pay regular visits to exhibitions at the Art Centre, many of which are brought here at considerable cost from all parts of Canada, Britain and the United States.

"We, in Victoria, are vitally interested in music and we are proud of our symphony orchestra and its conductor, Hans Gruber. Unfortunately, our appreciation of paintings and works of art in general seems to have lagged behind, partly owing to the fact that we have no gallery and no central point where artists can exchange ideas, grow and develop."

Mrs. Wyllie's expressive hands moved gently to emphasize her remarks.

"We need more sympathetic understanding toward the visual arts," she stressed, "a great appreciation of works of art in general.

"And above all, our people must take a vital interest in what is going on in the world of art outside our own small circle."

Hildegarde Wyllie has a background that enables her to speak with assurance on the art of painting and the subject of art galleries.

LOVES TO PAINT

At "Omeishan" are pictures from her own brush, some done many years ago, others within the last few months.

Oils, or water colors are her medium and landscapes her favorite mode of expression.

With her husband, Mrs. Wyllie has traveled to many countries and in these countries, as she tells you, "we have visited the small places to get the feel of the land."

Last year they visited Brittany and already this year have been in southern California and the mid-west States.

Always Mrs. Wyllie carries her paints and brushes with her and she brings back to "Omeishan" picture memories of her travels.

A true feeling for color brings her landscapes to life for anyone who happens to know the particular spot caught and held by her artistic brush.

A study of the Coldstream Valley in the Okanagan and a group of pine trees on a Cariboo hillside gave this reporter keen delight.

Mrs. Wyllie has shown her paintings at the Art Centre here and at the Vancouver Art Gallery, when she was living in that mainland city.

While in Vancouver she was active in the organizing and founding of the Vancouver Art Gallery.

"And I would so like to have a part in founding a gallery in this city too," she tells you.

"There are some priceless paintings in private homes in Victoria," she explained, "but only a few people see them.

"If we had a gallery, they would be loaned for exhibitions and everyone with a love of the arts would have an opportunity to see them."

Her expressive face held a prophetic look of determination as she concluded, "That day will come!"

Mrs. Wyllie with "Tovarich" — Tovy for short—at her attractive home in Saanich. She tells you, "to love something deeply and to be able to express it in some form of art, is the secret of happy life." She uses oils and water colors in her paintings.

Dr. and Mrs. James Anderson arrived in Victoria last Wednesday from Hong Kong and at present are staying at the home of Mrs. Anderson's mother, Mrs. Alex Gillespie on Fairfield Road. The Andersons plan to make their future home in Canada.

Mother's Day Tea

Royal Bride Chapter, I.O.D.E., will hold their annual Mother's Day tea Sunday at the home of F. C. Green, 347 Foul Bay Road. Mrs. G. F. Green is convener of the affair and will be assisted by Mesdames P. M. Nerland, A. Hutcheson, J. T. Dunn, G. Forbes, H. N. Parrott, R. J. Clarke, F. J. Ritchie and R. Saunders.

A Mother's Influence Spans Generations

Mrs. J. C. Scott, formerly of Winnipeg and for the past 10 years a resident of Victoria, lives with her daughter, Mrs. G. A. R. Stelck, left, 1218 Old Esquimalt Road, and with her grandchildren, Aletha, 10½, and young David. As part of the Stelck family circle, Mrs. Scott sees the principles and beliefs she instilled in her daughter passed on to a third generation. Mrs. Stelck finds time not only to enjoy her family and her home but to also take an active part in I.O.D.E. and parent-teacher work in Esquimalt. Aletha is a student at Lampson Street School and David, five and one-half, attends pre-primary classes at Victoria West. On Mother's Day, as they do on most Sundays, Mr. and Mrs. Stelck with Mrs. Scott and the children will attend service at Metropolitan United Church.

Marjorie Holdsworth and A. F. Brimacombe Exchange Nuptial Vows In Church Manse This Afternoon

This afternoon in the manse of Metropolitan United Church, Dr. A. E. Whitehouse heard nuptial vows spoken by Marjorie Holdsworth, daughter of Mrs. Ethel Holdsworth, 1344 Minto Street, and the late Harry Holdsworth, and Alfred Francis Brimacombe, Vancouver, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. F. Brimacombe, of Yorkton, Sask.

A dressmaker suit of Queen's blue corded wool complemented with Spring white blouse and close-fitting straw hat touched with floral clusters was worn by the bride. Her accessories were white and her jewelry a necklace of pearls with matching earrings. She pinned a corsage bouquet of vivid red roses to her suit lapel. Herman Holdsworth gave his sister in marriage.

An afternoon gown of floral nylon was worn by matron of honor, Mrs. H. Holdsworth. With her gown she wore a straw hat of white and navy, with matching accessories. A corsage bouquet of gardenias encircled in pink rosebuds completed her ensemble.

Allin Brimacombe came from Vancouver to be best man for his brother.

For the occasion the living-room of the manse was decorated with bright Spring blooms. Mrs. Whitehouse played traditional wedding music.

The Torquay Drive, Gordon Head, home of Mr. and Mrs. H. Holdsworth, was scene of a reception where the bride's table was set lace cloth, bud vases filled with forget-me-nots and three-tier wedding cake encircled in shell pink tulle. Fred Hayes proposed a toast to his niece.

The bride's aunt, Mrs. Fred Hayes, poured tea at a table set with Queen Ann lace cloth, silver basket of pink tulips and lighted pink candles. Assisting in serving were Mrs. L. V. Holdsworth, Mrs. P. Leche and Mrs. C. Neyhens.

For traveling the bride donned a Summer white topcoat over her bridal ensemble.

Following an Up-Island honeymoon and later on the Mainland, the couple will make their home in Vancouver.

Among out-of-town guests at the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. L. V. Holdsworth, New Westminster, Mr. and Mrs. A. Brimacombe, Vancouver, and Mrs. W. Greenwood, Naramata, B.C.

SHOPPING GUIDE

Hey, Lucky Me! I Found Dresses For 'Teen-Agers

By PENNY SAVER

Phoned my good friend Mabel, this morning. Good thing, too. She was stewing . . . literally, of course, over a buying problem . . . who isn't? She tells me she has a little niece, about 13 years old, for whom she would like to buy a birthday dress.

Most generous of her, said I, and she said she thought so, too, but that hadn't solved her problem. Evidently. Desdemona is that 'tween-age where plumpness causes a good deal of trouble.

She'd looked at some dresses and now has a choice. Either she takes a larger size and have the little gal wandering around with a 10-inch hemline or choose the child's supposedly correct size and have the youngster poured into the garment.

Now, hold onto your little horses half a second, says I, and I'll tell you about a couple of recent numbers I've seen.

The dresses I found were exactly for the 12 to 14, impossible age group, if I may call them that. Sure, Desdemona wants to look like her streamlined sister but the result is nill when she climbs into a dress that mom's prescribed. Designers, too, must have daughters of this age and have done something to eliminate the awkwardness that comes when over-supplied with limbs and baby plumpness.

The first little summer frock was a figured print . . . sanforized to be sure . . . with neckline edged with eyelet, as well as on the pockets, in the full skirt. Price on that one $3.98. For school, who could ask for more?

For summer parties, suitable for Sunday best or Saturday best for that matter, are the sanforized cottons styled with plain neckline . . . right for the chubby youngster . . . self-covered buttons, full patch pockets and side zipper opening.

A dollar more are the type of waffle piques . . . that very new crispness . . . very junior missish with petalled collar, sleeveless and tie-belt. Daffodil yellow, it is. Another was designed with cuffed sleeve, and sported a row of marble-like buttons.

In crease-resistant cotton . . . a pet of a plaid it was . . . with generous three-inch hemlines and whipped seams, $7.50.

"Sheer delights" are the dotted organzas with their perky Peter Pan collars, shining pearl buttons and trim wee belts. For very, very, very special best, $7.95.

The latest in junior vogue, of course, are the two-piece dress sets with modern version of the jerkin. The detachable jerkin is styled with front cuff pockets and can be slipped right over the dress. The dress, by the way, is fashioned with plain blouse and pleated skirt. All of pique, and $7.98 to buy.

Although the water's not quite warm enough, unless of course you're the polar bear type, there are bathing suits of plain or two-toned jersey with satin lastex. They're cleverly designed and only $3.98 is marked on the price tag.

A shopping good time to you, dear Mabel!

Well-Women Clinics Is Success

MONTREAL (CP).—Legend has it that the Chinese paid their physicians to keep them well. When a patient became ill, payments stopped—therefore the doctor saw to it that his patients were kept healthy.

The well-women clinic of the Royal Victoria Hospital is a modern example of this ancient practice.

Dr. N. W. Philpott, obstetrician and gynaecologist-in-chief of the hospital, says it is much easier to keep people well than to cure them after they are sick.

The clinic, organized for only two and one-half years, is dedicated to the task of keeping women well.

In the last year more than 2,000 women attended the clinic. Among them only 12 cancer cases were discovered and the same number of cases of tuberculosis.

In addition to a physical check-up by a surgeon, gynaecologist, and specialist in internal medicine, the patient receives X-rays, blood tests, urinalysis and cancer tests.

The clinic was intended at first for non-paying cases only, but the demand being so high for this type of check-up the clinic now admits housewives from the lower and moderate-income brackets.

Fees range from nothing to $12.

The well-women clinic does not treat patients. Every woman is asked for the name of her doctor, and when examination and tests are completed, reports are sent to him.

England's Chefs Doll Up Old Recipes For Big Festival

LONDON (CP)—Using old cookery recipes, several well-known London restaurants plan to regale Festival of Britain visitors with "old English" dishes.

These are four recipes overseas visitors may sample:

Cornwall's star-gazy pie: Clean and bone six herring. Place a fish in a pie dish lined with fat and breadcrumbs. Season and add eggs beaten in Tarragon vinegar. Cover dish with pastry, leaving a centre hole through which the heads stick upwards. Bake for one hour and place a sprig of parsley in the mouth of each fish before serving.

Huntingdon figett pie: Put a layer of apples in a pie dish, add onions and diced bacon. Season and repeat layers of apples and onions until dish is full. Cover dish with short-crust pastry and cook for two hours.

Oxford's Banbury pie: Place a layer of apples in a well-greased dish, sprinkle with peel and currants, pour over a little heated butter, addd a sprinkle of sugar and flavor of cinnamon. Repeat layers till dish is full and cover with short pastry. Bake for 30 minutes, then glaze with milk and sugar.

Surrey fritters: Beat three eggs. Add stale white breadcrumbs till mixture has the consistency of whipped cream and sweeten to taste with castor sugar. Flavor with nutmeg and drop into boiling fat.

Margaret Jenkins — Fathers' night will be held at meeting of Margaret Jenkins Bank Street, P.-T.A., Monday at 7:30. Bruce Humber will talk on "Track Sports" and an Empire Day program will be presented by pupils of the school. Annual election of officers will be held.

WHY GROW OLD?

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

Weight, Hair, Face, Figure Are Worrying These Women

Double chin? Try this corrective exercise.

Q. "I am 14½ years old, 5 feet 6½ inches tall and weigh 133 pounds; My bust measures 34 inches; waist, 25 inches, and hips 34 inches. Am I overweight?"

A. No. Your measurements are lovely, too. If you wish to make any slight improvement take waist exercises.

Q. "I have a problem. When I wash my hair it becomes unruly. It is just naturally curly. What can I do about this?"

A. If you wear it fairly short already cut it a bit shorter After it is set spray on liquid lacquer and leave it on for the rest of that day. This is not like the old lacquer, but much lighter, and I think this will help you keep your hair in place."

Q. "Where can I get your facial exercises?"

A. Send a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request for leaflet No. 9. Address me in care of this newspaper.

Q. "Please tell me what I can do to get rid of my double chin?"

A. Improve your posture and do this exercise: Sit or stand. Lower your head backwards as far as you can. Lift the head. Continue. Another—lower head back to the right and look over right shoulder. Lift head. Next time lower head to the left and look over left shoulder. Continue.

Q. "What can I do for a spare tire? I have blackheads all over my face. I am 5 feet, 5½ inches tall and weigh 145 pounds. My bust measures 37 inches; waist, 29 inches, and hips, 40 inches. Help!"

A. Lose five to ten pounds, depending on your boney structure. Take waist-reducing exercises and also hip-reducing exercises. Wash your face about four times a day with soap and water, using a complexion brush, in a rotary motion. Do not use cream on your face. Put fats low in the diet. Always remove makeup at night—with soap and water.

Q. "I am 37 years old and have never worn a girdle. I can do without one but everyone says I should wear one. Can you give me any special points about how to buy a well-fitted girdle?"

A. In the first place go to a store which has a regular corset department and persons who know about fitting. Then try the girdle out in the fitting-room. It should be comfortable. Sit down while you have it on, bend and walk about. If it is uncomfortable, if stays pinch you—then you need another model or some remodeling done on that one. I think any figure looks better in clothes with a girdle. This can be a lightweight, three-way stretch which will not be binding but will give your costumes a foundation.

Wallace Denies Charges

SOUTH Salem, N.Y. (AP)—Henry Wallace, former U.S. Vice-President, denied Friday night that he discussed bringing Communists into the Chinese Nationalist government during conversations he had with Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek in 1944.

He took issue with the agreement voiced Friday in Washington by Defence Secretary George Marshall and Senator F. Knowland (Rep.-Calif.) that a 1949 United States white paper on China indicated he had suggested Chinese Communists be taken into the Chiang government "as early as 1944." Wallace had been sent to China by President Roosevelt.

VICTORIAN SPRING

by Cecil Maiden

LXXXIII

Letty got to her feet restlessly, and began to pace up and down the room, her eyes fixed on the carpet, seeing in her mind every detail of the incident at the wharf again.

She told him about it—and about her plans to deal with it.

"My poor child, this isn't a search for you to make!"

"Who else, Mr. Cridge? In the jail there's a man whose life is at stake. Nothing else matters to me just now but that."

"He may be acquitted."

"And even if he were—how many people would go on believing otherwise? The only way for me to help him is to prove his innocence. And I'm the only one who saw what happened."

"But how can you help, my dear? What are you going to do—by yourself?"

She looked across at him with deep resolve. "I'm going to find the man who did it, Mr. Cridge. Somehow or other, with God's help, I'll get him to confess this thing. I've saved a little money; enough to take me to the Cariboo in search of him."

Mr. Cridge rose to his feet, with great anxiety on his face now.

"The Cariboo's a big territory! How can you hope to find him in it?"

"I'll watch. I'll ask questions. At Barkerville, and wherever I may have to go from there, I'll go on asking questions. Humanly speaking, I suppose it would seem hopeless among such crowds. But I've learned something from Amelia."

"From Amelia?"

"I used to wonder if Amelia was the right kind of girl to be a missionary. Since then—well, I've watched her, Mr. Cridge. When she feels that something's right she seems to acquire a special kind of faith in it. This thing I'm planning to do is right, too, and I think I'll find what I'm looking for."

"I like your spirit, Miss Merridew. But the Cariboo's no place for a woman!"

She thought of that, too, for a moment, then smiled at him, trying so earnestly to win his blessing on her decision. "Mr. Cridge, if I can do it, I might save Jervis Braid's life, or his good name. Surely that's a right thing."

He was no longer shaking his head at her. "Yes, my dear girl, it is a right thing."

"Then God will guide me." She spoke the words very simply, with a trust that became almost a conviction as she uttered them. He came a little closer to her, and taking one of her hands, patted it gently. "I shall pray for that, my dear. I shall pray for that."

She noticed the clock. It was nearly half past four.

"At 5 o'clock," she said, "I'm going down to the jail again. The Commissioner's going to let me see him."

"Would you like me to go with you?"

"That's very kind of you, Mr. Cridge, but would you mind if I—well, I'd like to meet him alone, if they'll let me."

"I understand, child."

She gathered herself together. She looked away from him, lest she should show any weakness. This, she realiztd, with all the dangers of the Cariboo in front of her, might be her last sight of this kindly, fatherly man. Her voice faltered only slightly when she spoke.

"I'll see that Mary Langley's horse is picked up and taken back to her, Mr. Cridge. And I must say goodbye to Mrs. Cridge. There's a chance of a passage in the Enterprise tonight. The sooner I leave the better. . ."

With a compassionate smile he opened the door for her, and followed her across into the little kitchen—rich, now, with the smell of new-baked bread.

Canoe River Train Wreck Trial May Hang On Two Vital Words In Order

PRINCE GEORGE, B.C. (CP)—Testimony on inclusion of two vital words in a train order Friday took up the third day of the manslaughter trial of Alfred John Atherton.

The 22-year-old Canadian National Railways telegrapher was charged following the Canoe River, B.C., train wreck November 21 in which 21 persons perhead-on.

A. E. Tisdale, Kamloops, B.C., dispatcher, when sent the original order, admitted that had he been paying closer attention when Atherton repeated back the order to him he would have noticed omission of words "at Cedarside."

Defence counsel John Diefenbaker said dispatchers must write down each train order as they communicate it to the operators, and must underline each word of it as operators read it back to them.

The Crown claims Atherton, in passing the order to the conductor of the westbound troop train, failed to include the words "At Cedarside," which would have sent the train onto a siding there to await passing of the eastbound passenger train.

Tisdale said Atherton's version of the order made perfect sense as far as train orders go, and that it could well have been understood as a correct order.

The order did include the words "At Gosnell," where the troop train was to have again been shunted to a siding to await passing of another passenger train.

Evidence was being heard today from conductors of the two trains involved.

Three witnesses remain to be called by the Crown. The defence has not indicated the number of witnesses it will call.

6 MEMORIAMS

GLOVER—In loving memory of my dear husband, J. E. Ted Glover, who passed away May 13, 1950:
"One year has passed since that sad day,
When one we loved was called away;
God took him home—it was His will;
Within our hearts he liveth still.
—Ever remembered by his wife and family.

MASON—In memory of our beloved mother, Rhonwen Mason, who passed away May 4, 1946, and our beloved father, James L. Mason, who passed away July 29, 1946:
Sunshine passes, shadows fall,
Love's remembrance outlasts all,
And though the years be many or few,
All are filled with remembrance of you.
—Ever remembered by their family.

IN TUNE WITH THE TIMES

NEWS OF THE WORLD

by Tommie Walters

ABOUT TELEVISION—TV is making a lot of movie people mad—mad, that is, at the film industry. It appears TV studios rent OLD films at varying low prices, run them over and over again, and the actors in the pictures get nothing for these re-re-runs. Matter of fact, at the time these pictures were made they didn't get much either. When the old-time actor tries to get a job in TV, the producers want to know "Why should we hire you at the current high prices? We get you in old movies for less money—and we get you as a younger man!"

* * *

Musical director, Al Woodbury is a notable example. In 1932 he wrote the musical score for a Shirley Temple two-reeler and got paid $25 for scoring 400 measures. A job like that today would be worth $500. "That picture is being shown again and again on TV," laughs Woodbury, "but it means nothing more to me financially. Worst of it is, after we finished the picture, the director borrowed $15 from me and never repaid it. So I wound up contributing to both movies and TV for only $10."

* * *

When TV grows up in a matter of 10 years or so, in the opinion of one Hollywood producer, hardly any of the present-day comedians will be around. Viewers will be watching fresh, young talent which hasn't yet appeared on the scene. The public's appetite for comedy in the next 10 years will change completely, he says, and comedians who have been around for many moons on radio will be passed. This is further emphasized when you consider the enthusiastic reception the "Great Gildersleeve" received from the critics after seeing his first video screening. His sponsors are pleased with the effort but will announce no definite plans for the vehicle as yet. They prefer to study TV trends for a while before making a decision.

Furthermore, Hollywood insiders expect a big blow-up in TV circles over new union fees for talent. The subject is a hot one, but fact remains that some live talent has been dropped in favor of cheaper films because sponsors refuse to meet what they term exhorbitant fees. Watch this one! It's a hot coal.

* * *

TV EXTRAS—According to a top ad agency man in New York, 60 per cent of the New York TV shows will be in Hollywood by next fall, and that percentage will climb with succeeding months. . . . Since last November sponsored network radio shows increased from 207 to 214 and TV dropped three of its 162, according to a recent survey. . . . Comics Bud Abbott and Lou Costello are reported nibbling at a TV contract offered by their former radio sponsor. . . . "Amos 'n' Andy's" TV debut is slated for June 28. The entire cast has been doing one show a week on film at the Hal Roach Studios, and will have 52 half-hour shows set by late June. . . . Maria Riva, the talented actress-daughter of Marlene Dietrich, has been signed to an exclusive, long-term contract by CBS-TV.

* * *

Maria Riva, 26, is the second young dramatic performer to affiliate with the new CBS Television star system. Although she has only appeared in three network TV productions, Hubbell Robinson Jr., vice-president in charge of programs, points out, her ability was recognized immediately by producers. Robinson believes she shows promise of becoming one of TV's brightest stars. Miss Riva will co-star with Berry Kroeger in "Portrait by Rembrandt" on "Studio One" May 14.

* * *

OVER THE WEEK-END—Tonight there is the finals in the B.C. Talent Quest from the stage at Memorial Arena at 8.05 over CJVI. "Saturday Magazine" is on CBR at 6.30. There's baseball on CKDA at 9.05 and the draw for the car and announcement of the winner of the Queen contest at the B.C. Products Fair over CJVI is at 10. On Sunday we invite you to listen to "Invitation to Music" on KIRO at 10 (CBR at 12.00); then the "Symphonette" on KIRO at 11.30; the new Lucio Agostini show "Whispering Strings" at 5 on CBR; "Theatre Guild" on KOMO starring Rosalind Russell in "Craig's Wife" at 5.30; "Trans-Canada Theatre" at 6, on CBR; and the "Standard Hour" over KOMO at 8.30.

Radio times and programs are furnished by stations and networks and are subject to last minute changes. The Times assumes no responsibility for inaccurate listings.

DOCTOR SAYS

By Dr. Edwin P. Jordan

"What can be done for my father who suffered a stroke of apoplexy several weeks ago? What is the outlook for him?" Questions like these come up more and more often because as the life span has become lengthened, the chances of having some disorder traceable to the blood vessels have also increased. A stroke is one of these.

In order to answer these questions intelligently one must know what a stroke is about. It is a condition in which some artery supplying blood to a portion of the brain becomes hardened or otherwise weakened and allows some blood to escape into the surrounding area. Or it allows a clot to form in a blood vessel thus cutting off the circulation to some part of the brain tissue.

Usually either one of these events comes suddenly and is accompanied by symptoms which depend on the size and location of the injury to the brain. In other words, a small hemorrhage, or clot in an unimportant part of the brain may pass unnoticed while a larger or less favorably located area of damage can cause such things as loss of consciousness or paralysis of one side of the body.

Now then, the questions can be answered with the usual medical ifs and buts. Take the second question first. The outlook depends on where the bleeding or clot was, the size of the damaged area and the state of the other blood vessels. If all of these are favorable the patient may get along well and not have any further trouble. If the contrary is the case, the outlook is poor.

DOCTORS OPTIMISTIC

Concerning what can be done, doctors are more optimistic than they used to be and can do a good deal more. Many of those who have had a stroke are now started on slight physical activity quite early. This permits faster retaining of the muscles.

Massage, braces and other measures are being used more and more often. Although no one should expect too much, it is true today as never before that many of those who suffer a stroke can be rehabilitated to a remarkable degree.

Q—Is it true that after an operation for gall bladder or any other you will have to go back in about six months for an appendix operation? Is the appendix more liable to go bad after one has been operated on? Miss J. M.

A—The answer to both questions is "no." If appendicitis develops in a few months after another operation, it must be ascribed to coincidence.

* * *

Q—I want to know whether the value of glutamic acid as a "brain food" has been established and whether the results are lasting.
Mrs. C. H. K.

A—It is too soon to know all the answers about glutamic acid. At present it is only possible to say that some interesting studies with glutamic acid have been reported and more are going on. Its practical value as a brain food has not yet been "established."

* * *

Q—Please say something about sinus tachycardia. I have been told that the cause is unknown and also that it comes from the nerves. I know one does not die from it but it is uncomfortable to live with. Mrs. L. L. S.

A—This is a condition in which the heart beats fast, usually intermittently. Both answers are more or less right since the cause is not always clear and yet the nervous system may play a part. Too much smoking, chronic infections, excitement and the like sometimes bring on an attack. Some people have this for a few months or years and then it may disappear of itself. Fortunately, as the writer remarks, it is uncomfortable rather than dangerous.

* * *

The skin does its job remarkably well but strange things do happen to it once in a while.

Q—My eight-year-old son has a skin infection called pityriasis rosea. What is the remedy and how long does it last?
Mrs. C. D.

A—This is a mild condition which usually requires no treatment. It generally clears up in a few weeks and should be gone by the time this appears in print.

Q—I have cracks along the edges of the bottom of my feet. They are rather painful but seem to go away after I cover them with adhesive. However, they come back, though not always in the same spot. What, if anything, can be done? M. W.

A—This is possibly ringworm or some other fungus infection. It would be best to have scrapings made for diagnosis and try to get rid of it permanently rather than just using adhesive tape indefinitely.

* * *

Q—Once a year or so I find a bald spot on my head, each time in a different place. What could this be? Mrs. J. C. K.

A—This is probably a condition known as alopecia areata. Occasionally it involves all the hair of the head, even the eyebrows. The hair usually grows back but some professional advice would not be amiss.

* * *

Q—I had a fall 30 years ago and hit the lower part of the spine. Now it pains me so much at times I can't sit down. Could this cause trouble in my older age? Mrs. T. S.

A—It seems to be causing enough trouble now. The chances are there has been an injury to the coccyx which is the lower section of the spine. Since it is giving so much difficulty why not have an X-ray and consultation with an orthopedic specialist?

Would Expect Great Effort By Shipyards

Canadian shipyards in the event of future war will be required to expend greater effort and produce more than they did in World War II, Mr. Justice J. V. Clyne, Vancouver, former chairman of the Canadian Maritime Commission, told members of the Canadian Shipbuilding and Ship Repairing Association Friday.

He urged that shipyards keep themselves in a permanent state of readiness.

Mr. Justice Clyne said the shipbuilders could expect fullest co-operation from the Canadian Government. He observed that while ships could be built at less cost in foreign yards, the government had shown itself prepared to meet Canadian shipbuilding costs.

J. C. Lessard, deputy minister of transport, who attended the conference, said that while plans for a new lighthouse tender for Victoria had been shelved because of the heavy defence program, Victoria would get the next tender constructed.

To Probe Shooting Of Handcuffed Men

WARNER-ROBINS, Ga. (AP)—A Georgia police chief fatally shot two soldier-prisoners last night and today found himself the centre of civil-military inquiry into the killings.

Thomas Bragg, chief of police at Hawkinsville, shot the two privates in the presence of his six-year-old son.

Bragg said he was attacked by his prisoners and shot them in self-defence. A coroner's jury agreed. But Sheriff C. E. Chapman said the soldiers were unarmed and handcuffed together at the time of the shooting.

Planes Seek C-47 Missing In Wash.

FAIRCHILD AIR FORCE BASE, Wash. (UP) — Air force and civil air patrol planes took off today under clearing skies to search for an air force C-47 transport plane with two crewmen aboard which disappeared near here yesterday.

Two B-17's and a C-82 air rescue plane from the C-47's McChord air force base left to scout the area northeast of here. Six to 12 civil air patrol planes were ordered into the search.

Celanese Strike A Warning Note

By HARRY YOUNG, Times Business Editor

The odd man out in the averages on Toronto, Montreal and New York stock exchanges this week was the western oils. The Canadian prairie oil section was the only one which advanced during the week ending Friday afternoon.

The advance—105.85 to 105.91—was a mere .06, but it was significant in view of the much heavier losses in many other sections of the exchanges. The indications are that in a more favorable trading period, the western oils would have shot much further ahead.

The Toronto industrials for instance slipped back to 332.35, off 4.79, while New York's 30 industrials at 258.52 were off 4.25. Metals on Toronto were down 4.65 at 179.87.

* * *

What may have been a slowing down contributor to the markets was the first quarterly report of Celanese Corporation for 1951. President Howard Blancke in that revealing document informed his shareholders that the sales of Celanese Corporation in the first three months of 1951 had risen $10,315,331 to $63,537,932.

On the face of it, this was excellent news, but it was sadly tempered by the qualification that the increased sale in no way covered the higher taxation the corporation will have to pay and that the quarterly earnings of each common share was down from $1.65 to $1.28.

If the Celanese Corporation experience is typical, then some of the higher earnings being reported by the big American companies for the first quarter of 1951 do not look so hot when placed on the net profit line.

The enthusiasm for western oils has been stirred largely by the Iranian situation, which must eventually mean that oil on this continnent increases in strategic value. It has also been pepped up by the continued successes of the various drilling campaigns which are bringing the natural gas pipeline dream nearer to reality.

One of the most successful of the recent explorers has been Britalta, the B.C. company of which R. H. B. Ker of Victoria is president. Britalta has brought in three healthy gas producers in the Many Islands gas field near Medicine Hat, and it has five more drills still to make.

The Britalta gassers are unusual for Alberta in that they have given up to 23 feet of gas-yielding sand, which is considerably deeper than the normal gas-fields in which the pay zone is often as shallow as 6 feet.

Just after Britalta announced their third gasser, the shares of the company, which are not listed on Vancouver, jumped as high as 3.20. Before the first well came in a few weeks ago the shares sold at 1.15.

* * *

Other good oil news of the week, although it had no connection with Albertan fields, came from International Petroleum in the announcement of a quarterly dividend of 25 cents in U.S. funds.

Hitherto the company had paid semiannual dividends of 25 cents, and last December it paid an extra of 20 cents, making 70 cents for the year.

With the new indicated rate at $1 the shares of International advanced during the week from $19 to $21—a new high.

Two More Wells Rated Producers

CALGARY—Two more wells are reported as producers this week-end.

Cambridge and New British Dominion have brought in their first success at Joseph Lake on a quarter-section farmout from Imperial to Cambridge. New British put up drilling costs for 50 per cent interest. On test from 3246 to 3,249 feet a flow of gas at the rate of 940,000 cubic feet daily.

Okalta is also reported to have a D-2 producer as a west offset to York Leduc No. 1. The well is Okalta Knull and official report of drillstem tests are awaited.

Iron Works Profit

Net profit of Toronto Iron Works for 1950 rose to $344,534 from $264,199 in 1949. This represents earnings of $2.84 per share compared with $2.13.

Tip-Top Results

Earnings of Tip Top Tailors Ltd. in 1950 were $2.84 per share compared with $2.66 per share in 1949. Operating profit and working capital both increased.

MARKET REPORTS

Prices Lower, Trade Dull

TORONTO, May 12 (CP).—Prices slipped lower in dull trading today.

Traders sat on the sidelines and except for a handful of small losses, the market was mostly without trend.

Bathurst Power A and Dominion Foundries dropped more than a point in the otherwise fractionally changed board.

Consolidated Smelters stood out in base metals with a loss of about $2 and Hudson Bay was down about $1. East Sullivan, International Nickel and United Keno Hill were off fractions while Golden Manitou and Steep Rock posted small advances.

Western oils were fairly mixed but the tendency was on the downside. Anglo-Canadian, Del Rio and Gridoil declined pennies while Federated Petroleum and Pacific Petroleum firmed.

Golds again attracted little interest.

Wall Street Retreats

NEW YORK (AP) — Prices retreated quietly today in the stock market.

Among leaders the widest loss stopped short of $2 a share, and most of the decline was measured at under $1.

Marked down were J. I. Case, Caterpillar Tractor, Bethlehem Steel, General Motors, U.S. Rubber, Southern Railway, Cities Service, Du Pont, American Can and American Woolen.

Curb prices moving lower included Aluminum Co. of America, Colts Mfg., Fansteel Metallurgical and Humble Oil.

Two Bright Spots

VANCOUVER—Prices declined in most sections with Alberta Distillers taking another 10-cent drop to 3.00.

Two bright features among oils were Calvan, which jumped 5 cents to 5.90 and Federated which put on 10 cents at 8.75. Other oils shaded slightly off.

Activity in mines was slight, but Estella improved slightly to 2.00 and Hedley stood firm at .48. Others drooped, Western Uranium was 1.90, down 5 cents, while Premier Border, Quatsino, Van Roi and Base Metals shed pennies.

Massey Active

MONTREAL (CP) — Securities eased slightly over a wide front near the close today after opening mainly unchanged. Trading was moderate.

Industrial losses outnumbered gains around four to one and ranged mostly in small fractions. The few gainers were also narrow.

Papers displayed the widest array of minus signs, followed in line by utilities, senior oils, banks, senior metals, beverages, textiles, constructions and chemicals.

Meanwhile, steels were fractionally mixed and millings were unchanged. Massey-Harris, which jumped 1¼ points to a new high of 13½ under an unexpectedly heavy turnover, eased ¼ from the high.

Mines and western oils were hesitant. Changes were narrow and there was no significant features.

Industrial volume was 16,200 shares traded and mines had a turnover of 68,000 shares.

President Appointed

Roy Robinson has been appointed president of Consolidated Central Cadillac Mines, succeeding the late Gerald McTeigue.

Fred E. Hall, mine manager of Ascot Metals Corporation becomes a director, and A. N. Ovenden is the new secretary-treasurer.

Weston Gives Frock-Coated Shop Assistants Pay Hike

LONDON (CP).—Canadian millionaire Garfield Weston this week became virtual controller of a big London department store. Weston gained control of Fortnum & Masons, famous Piccadilly store, by adding nearly 40,000 of the firm's shares to his holdings.

Weston, who left London last night by air for New York, told reporters at the airport:

"The acquisition of the store—and I have almost one-man control now—will not give me another thousand a year income. Fortnum & Masons started in the grocery business. I am the biggest grocer in Canada and other places. That is, why I wanted the store."

Before he left London tonight, Weston ordered raises all around for the store staff—10 per cent for executive grades and 5 per cent for the lower echelons.

The Weston organization, it is understood, plans to export some of the store's food products to Canada and the United States.

Fortnum & Masons started as a tiny candle shop in the reign of Queen Anne and grew gradually into a London institution. Customers are served by clerks in black morning suits and frock coats.

Kitimat May Get Railroad

VANCOUVER (CP).—A rail link between Terrace and Kitimat, site of the Aluminum Company of Canada's new city, is being studied by the Canadian National Railways.

C.N.R. construction engineers are at Terrace surveying the route that was once explored by the old Grank Trunk Pacific line.

If undertaken, the line would be about 40 miles long and would connect Kitimat with the main C.N.R. tracks running out of Prince Rupert.
